STUMPING THE LEADER

A Guide To Real Motoring Economy

Local Ford Dealer, Guy S. Wood, Gives Factors for the "Dollar Wise" to Consider When Purchasing a Car.

When considering economy in a motor car, four factors should be taken into account—first cost, operating cost, maintenance cost, and trade-in value after a period of years.

The matter of first cost can be definitely determined only by ascertaining the "delivered" price. Freight costs differ. So, too, do "handling" costs. To get a true picture of first cost, the buyer should be governed not by "F.O.B." prices but the delivered price of the fully equipped car.

Operating costs vary with drivers as well as with cars, for no two persons drive alike. Excessive speed is not conducive to economy; and sudden spurts—the sudden opening and closing of the throttle—cause gasoline waste; so also does excessive use of the choke.

Operating economy therefore depends on driving methods as well as the efficiency of the engine. Whether a car has four, six or eight cylinders is not so important as the design of the engine. The present Ford car with its eight-cylinder engine is the most economically operating Ford car ever built. This economy is made possible by the design and construction of the engine. The use of eight cylinders does not mean the addition of two or four extra fuel chambers. The Ford V-8 takes the fuel supply of an ordinary four-cylinder engine and divides it eight ways. Reducing four larger explosions into eight smaller ones, gives engine smoothness and quietness. Eight cylinders indicate the way the gas is used, not the amount. It is just the difference between going upstairs in four long jumps or in eight ordinary steps.

With its dual down-draft carburetor, the fuel feed of the Ford V-8 is more direct and more accurate, and the addition of this type carburetion together with other engine refinements have greatly increased the fuel economy of the present cars.

So far as oil economy in the Ford V-8 is concerned, one of the greatest factors is the efficient cooling system. It is the only engine made in America with waterjackets around both the cylinder walls and the upper crankcase walls. Unless driven at excessive speeds there should be no need for adding oil in the Ford V-8 between regular changes at 1,000 miles.

Low maintenance cost is an important factor in Ford motoring. This is achieved thru the high quality of materials used, exceptionally low cost for parts, and an exclusive exchange service. Instead of repairing worn parts, the Ford owner is able to have them replaced with factory reconditioned units at a considerable saving. An example of this is the engine exchange service. He can have a factory-reconditioned engine installed in a few hours at a cost of only $49.50, plus freight—a cost which is much less than that of the average "overhauling" job. This same exchange service offered by no other manufacturer, is also available on many other units.

Probably the most vital factor of all in the economy of Ford ownership is the high re-sale value of Ford cars after a period of years. A recent survey in five widely separated distributing territories in the United States showed that Ford cars for every year since 1928 had a greater re-sale value than the average of all the cars of other makes for the same year which sold when new for $750 or less, F.O.B. factory.

Motorists of today are "dollar wise" as well as "motor wise"—they insist upon having the most that their dollar will buy, and it is not only low first cost but also low operating cost, low maintenance cost, and high re-sale value that have made the Ford V-8 America's fastest selling car.

THE CARL V. CLARKE HERD STILL LEADS

Third Consecutive Month Herd Tops All County Records With Gains Over Previous Months.

Making gains over both previous months, the herd of Carl V. Clarke, Andover dairyman, milking registered Holsteins, heads the list of high producing herds of the Allegany County Dairy Herd Improvement Association for May, after taking that same position in March and April.

The six cows in his herd averaged 1,602 pounds of milk and 51.6 pounds butterfat last month. In March the record was 43.8 pounds and in April 42.8. In accordance with new rules the Clerke herd was re-tested, as is done with all herds making 50 pounds or more of butterfat, and the figures above are an average of the first test and retest.

A. W. Edwards & Son, Rexville, was second with 43.2 pounds; R. S. Covel & Son, Wellsville, third with 41.5 pounds. The Covel herd appears in records for the first time. In 29 herds tested there were 588 cows.

The 15-cow herd of grade and purebred Guernseys of C. R. Guilford of Cuba produced an average of 40.7 pounds butterfat. Ten herds average better than 30 pounds each 13 better than 20, and but two less than 20.

Registered Holstein cows owned by H. E. Hurd & Son, Almond, and L. H. Jamison, Fillmore, each produced 77.6 pounds butterfat in May after being milked three times daily but the Hurd cow made 2,502 pounds milk while the Jamison dairy member made but 1,348. Of the ten high cows milked twice daily one owned by Sunnyside Farm, Friendship, led with 2,009 pounds milk, 68.3 pounds butterfat. Lynn Watson was close second, one of his animals making 68.1 pounds from but 1,048 pounds milk.

The Homer Utter Estate registered Holstein herd, Cuba, is a new herd for May. It had a nice average of 28.9 pounds butter fat, with 28 animals milking.

OVERLOADING HORSE AND BUGGY BRIDGES

Can State Take Your License Money and Then Arrest You for Using the Highways They Furnish?

Interest over overloading its horse and buggy days bridges with railway train like motor trucks is evident over Allegany county in Friday's trial here at 10 a. m., in Police Justice Frank D. Weldon's court of Phillip Lucci of Buffalo, arrested by state troopers for driving an overloaded truck on a posted bridge at Belmont, June 5th.

Lucci, an employee of the Moran Transportation Company, carting sugar and groceries for the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, drove a truck and trailer onto the Belmont Genesee river bridge on Schuyler street and four girders cracked and the floor sank several inches, making the one-way structure unsafe for vehicle use.

When arraigned last Saturday, Lucci plead not guilty and was released on $100 bail, pepper Friday. District Attorney Ward M. Hopkins represented the people. Should the driver plead guilty to hauling 21 tons as claimed by troopers, over a bridge posted for eight tons, he might become subject to suits for civil damages by the state which has spent thousands of dollars in repairing the damaged Belmont structure which officials hoped to open for use Tuesday after working 16 hours per day, Sunday included, in shoring up the weakened span with ten by ten inch timbers until it is determined what the state will do about a new bridge to replace the 1876 cross over.

Whatever the outcome of the case may be will be watched with interest as testing what rights loads many times greater than bridges of a half century ago were constructed or intended to carry now have to traverse scores of such structures over the Genesee river or smaller streams within the county's bounds.

RECEIVED AWARDS FOR GOOD WORK

Granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Akin Receive Compliments and Awards for Good Work in Music.

Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Akin have received the following account of their granddaughters', the Misses Barbara and Daphne Brownell progress in music at Winter Haven, Fla., from the local paper of June 2, 1934:

Two dozen young people, pupils of the Misses Grace and Margaret Kirk, acquitted themselves creditably last evening when they presented the annual pianoforte recital of this talented studio in the Civic League clubhouse, before an audience that filled the auditorium.

The program, which was printed in full in the Friday issue of the Chief, consisted of piano solos, duets, two piano numbers, two piano duets and two piano trio. The young artists ranged in age from five to seventeen, thus affording a program of much variety that held the interest of the audience through the entire one and three-quarters hours necessary to present the 35 individual numbers. Little Patsy Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Phillips was the "baby" of the program and participated in two numbers, one a two piano duo and the other a solo, in which she revealed an amazing skill usually found only in children twice her age. All the others contributed nobly to the success of the program, their technique and sense of rhythm and general excellence of execution reflecting the high type of training received under the Misses Kirk. The last half hour of the program was given over to renditions by several of the city's best known young lady musicians who played difficult classical numbers with rare artistry. These included Misses Jean Harris, Isabelle Sands, Doris Summerlin, Daphne Brownell and Betty Young, the Misses Kirk also participating in a few numbers.

At the close of the program Miss Grace Kirk presented awards and Dunning pins to the following: Constance Haas and Jack Suiter for scale work; Billy Pederson, for memorizing the largest number of pieces; Avis Snively for earning the greatest number of stars; Patsy Phillips, Burke Childs, Billy Jansen, Joan Cramer and Barbara Brownell for general good work as students; Daphne Brownell and Dorothea Jansen received Dunning pins; Isabelle Sands, a junior Dunning pin (she will receive a senior pin later in the summer); and Mary Elizabeth Young a prize for her recital given in January.

MORE NEW BOOKS IN ANDOVER LIBRARY

Interesting Facts About Recent Additions to the Books You May Loan From Your Library.

The Andover Library has received the third installment of books from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, which consists of the following titles:

Undiscovered Europe, by E. Alexander Powell

This book deals with a number of the small countries which rarely figure in the international news of the press, but which are familiar to us all. There is no other one book which treats of all of these picturesque and unusual little kingdoms and republics and we are fortunate to have this book to include in the Alcove collection.

Tschiffely's Ride, by A. F. Tschiffely

The author himself would be the first to declare that the two heroes of this book—Ten thousand miles in the saddle from Southern Cross to Pole Star—are the two horses, Mancha and Gata, themselves. There is more adventure and romance in this book than a hundred works of fiction—a book that will have a great appeal to the horse-lover, the traveller, and the lover of the open air.

Government and Politics of Italy, by H. R. Spencer

We are all interested to learn about Italy, but are perplexed by books which are either given to indiscriminate praise or bitter criticism of conditions now prevailing in that country. This book is a fair analysis of the present government and politics of Italy and is written in clear and simple language which can easily be understood.

My Russian Neighbors, by A. Wickstead

The author, a British, tells simply and informally of his experiences in Russia where he has resided for ten years.

Sweden, by Agnes Rothery

We, as Americans, ought especially to find this book interesting since it presents the life of the Swedish people not only in history and romance but in the practical working out of such problems as we are now facing in the New Deal. The discussion of these modern developments in no way overshadows the fascinating presentation of this picturesque country, which Count Keyserling has called "one of the most civilized countries of Europe."
