FRIENDS

By Jean Millspaugh

Friends are considered by some people as sacred. One of the nicest things in the world is a friend. Without friends, how can life be worth living?

"A friend in need is a friend indeed," is a famous quotation, found in many autograph albums. Some people still hang to the old saying that a person can be judged by the company he keeps. This, as I have found is not always true.

I like my friends to be happy-go-lucky, "easy come, easy go" type. I like the type that can take a joke, and see the optimistic, rather than the pessimistic side of life. Who likes the kind who go around weeping, wailing, and wondering what the dear old world is coming to? They should all get together and isolate themselves from the rest of the world. We might progress more rapidly if they were out of the way.

I also want some of my friends to be of the loyal type. Those who will stand by one thru thick and thin, no matter what happens.—Staunch friends are considered by some a luxury, something that should be looked up to and loved. One's parents should come under the heading of "staunch friends." Loyal friends are few and far between. Friends are something that cannot be replaced. Also, isn't it true, that when one goes to a strange town that the first thing one thinks of is getting acquainted?

Anyway, we know that just "good lies" and "oodles" of friends are one of the essentials of life. Also, few friends, but those of the quality that endure should be one's aim. All one ever wants.

BEAT BOLIVAR!!

There is no doubt that Andover High School has a wonderful football team and consequently there is little doubt about our winning the game from Bolivar Saturday.

Altho a good team is the most essential part in winning a game, school spirit is needed to encourage the players. We must show our school spirit next Saturday by attending the first game of the season and letting Bolivar hear us shout "BEAT BOLIVAR!!!"

THE DICTIONARY

By Philip Crandall

Giving quick estimation of the value of a dictionary, many persons would no doubt underestimate its usefulness. It is a plain, ordinary looking book. Perhaps it is our unfortunate practice to guess at the meaning of words. You will be amazed at the number of times the dictionary comes to your aid.

These are some of the circumstances in which you would be lost without a dictionary. If you were writing a letter and didn't know whether you had received or "received" the letter, if you had heard a common word pronounced two different ways and you were uncertain which was correct; if you were conversing with an intellectual person and he had spoken a word whose meaning you did not know; if you wanted to abbreviate and didn't know the abbreviation.

These are very common occurrences. Even if you do things well in each case, you can make guesswork a certainty by consulting the ever-useful dictionary. In addition to this, the dictionary can be used in some way in every class we attend. For instance, in English for composition work; in a language for derivations and the origin of words; in commercial subjects for the definition of some term with which we are not familiar.

You will be the one to choose whether you will speak clearly and understand well or whether you will be in the dark most of the time. Carry a pocket dictionary around and when you are in doubt as to the meaning or pronunciation of a word refer to your old standby, the dictionary.

If you have a command of the English language, you have started on your way to success.

Advice

To the Thin: Don't eat fast.
To the stout: Don't eat. Fast.

"I'm greater than Washington, Mrs. Joyce," said little Henry.

"Greater than Washington, Henry," queried the astonished teacher.

"Yes, ma'am; Washington couldn't tell a lie but I can."

FROM THE PRINCIPAL'S DESK

This week I am begging a little space in the editorial column of the Hi Herald to have an informal chat with all the boys and girls in school and, of course, I have no objections if the parents of these boys and girls tune in too.

By the time this paper comes from the press, you will be completing the third week of your new school year. It is rather important for each of you at this time to take a brief inventory of what you have accomplished so far and consider whither you are travelling.

I have already complimented you on the very fine way in which you have started your school year. I have found you to be a perfectly normal group of young people, with your own individual natures and temperaments, to be sure, but all responsive to fair play and all filled with that intense desire for experience and knowledge that is so characteristic of youth and about which are centered many of your problems.

However, please remember that no matter how valuable a good start may be, you cannot depend on the inertia of this beginning to carry you thru the year. There is no such thing as perpetual motion in school any more than in mechanics. Every machine, regardless of how well it is built, will eventually stop, unless energy is constantly applied to it. The novelty of a new school year, of new subjects, even of a new principal, will soon wear away. It is then that you will face the grim necessity of applying constant energy to your school work.

Even this has its compensations. A certain Greek philosopher once said: "Difficulties are the things that show what men are." Ahead of you then, lies the testing period. Will you be weighed in the balance and found wanting? The answer lies largely with your own self. May I suggest three responsibilities: First to your lessons. Do your daily work well and on time. Spend a little time in study each day outside of school hours.

Second, responsibility to others. No one may do exactly as he pleases. Conduct yourself properly, both in school and out, with due consideration for those in whose presence you may be. Respect the judgment of your parents and teachers.

Third, you have a responsibility to your school and community. Start the foundations for a good character here in school. Remember that it is what you are and not who you are that counts. Be loyal to your school, obeying its regulations and supporting its activities. The acceptance of this three-fold responsibility will go far towards insuring a really balanced education.

GUESS WHO? ? ?

There is a certain boy in the Sophomore Class who is especially distinguished by his freckles. He has brown eyes and auburn hair which is very curly. He is about five feet six inches tall. He seems to be an agreeable person at all times. He is a rather noisy person and is always laughing, or making others laugh. He seems to get a big kick out of teasing the girls. This boy has the making of a football hero. I'm sure you can all guess who this is for there is none other like him.

Answer next week.

Answer to last week's Guess Who —Marilla Janson.

FAMOUS FACTS ABOUT FIRST GRADE FOLKS

Study of the Registration Data in The First Grade Room Brings to Light Some Particularly Interesting Facts.

There are three sets of twins, that is, one pair, Paul and Pauline Pero are really twins, but the other sets are of different families, but born on the same day and same year. Audrey Milligan and Norma Steadman were both born June 28, 1928. James Hyland and Donald Burger celebrated the other pair. They were born March 7, 1929.

Barbara McKay, whose birthday is June 6, 1928, and Donald Gavin, born July 6, 1929, were born on the same day but in different years. Another pair having a birthday on the same day but of different year are Patricia Joyce, whose birthday is August 29, 1928 and Donald Baker who was born the same date in 1929.

The name of Donald is very famous in the first grade—there are four of them: Donald Blasdell, Donald Gavin, Donald Burger and Donald Northrup. There are three by the name of James: James Backus, James Gavin and James Hyland. Two Patricias: Patricia O'Keagan and Patricia Joyce and two Barbaras —Barbara Lehman and Barbara McKay.

A. H. S. TO PLAY BOLIVAR SATURDAY

Andover High School's first football game of the 1934 season will be played at Bolivar Saturday, September 22nd at 2:30 o'clock.

~~Thru the efforts of Coach McGee~~ and the players, the team should make a good showing.

Last year Andover won from Bolivar with a score of 6-0. Because of this victory, the boys are determined to win again.

Owing to the scarcity of substitute material, and the loss of players by graduation, considerable difficulty has been encountered in building an outstanding team, but with daily workouts, great improvement is expected as the season advances.

It is hoped that many football fans, both in school and out, will follow the team to Bolivar and give them rousing support.

The probable line-up for the Bolivar game is as follows:

Ends—J. McAndrew, H. McAndrew.
Tackles—E. Brewster, John Cannon or C. Burdick.
Guards—M. Sweet, R. Briggs.
Center—E. Alderson.
Backs—D. Clarke, D. Brundage, B. McGill, M. Briggs.

THE SPOTLIGHT ! !

Oh, I'm the Spotlight, as I slowly swing around, what do I find?

A group of pupils bustling with activities. The Freshmen, Sophomores, Seniors and Girls' Glee Club have organized for the year. The football season opens Saturday with a game with Bolivar and with the ambition to carry off all the laurels that go with it.

Then I find there is even an assembly Friday. So many things all starting at once makes my head whirl!

I search the nooks and darkest corners of the school rooms to find —you could never guess it—Georgie Joyce and several other little Freshman playing some kind of tag, the object of the game seemed to be to see how many times they could run underneath Eddie Brewsters arms.

This was too much for me, so I looked around to see what else was going on; a bright little beam struck Miss Russ' door so I decided to investigate and what should I find but Mr. McGee teaching commercial law —and Gertie Dean giggling as she never would stop. However, there seemed to be a few others who felt funny, too, just ask Howard McAndrew.

After a while I tip-toed down to Miss Trenkle's study hall. I dared not make any noise, and there sat "the worst of her worries" right in front of her desk—none other than the right honorable Johnny Cannon. He's the only one in the pair, declination to go against Miss Trenkle's wishes.

I felt terribly disillusioned, everything so quiet and efficient—nothing like the old happy-go-lucky school days at all, so I crept down the stairs to talk to Mr. Beebe. Why, I hardly knew the man—he was so terribly stout. When I asked him what was the matter he replied that his job is so easy, he never has to pick papers off the floor any more, so he is taking life easy.

"Way is me," so wait for me next week and follow my adventures along thruout the year. I will have many things to tell you because I will have a whole week to get acquainted in.

GREENWOOD

(Mrs. H. C. McCaffery, Reporter)

Village Library to be Opened

Plans are being made to bring a library back to this village. Feeling that the reading of good books and magazines is a worthwhile use of leisure time, and that it would benefit especially the young people of the school and village, the Greenwood Epworth League has chosen this as a worthy project. It is planned that this shall be a memorial library, in memory of Mrs. Mary D. Young, who did so much for the Greenwood Methodist church and the former library of the village.

Rooms have been obtained in the Orlo Freeland house, and the town of Greenwood is giving their support by paying the rent. This will be started on a small scale, with old books, some of them from the old library, and subscriptions and donations from local sources, together with the State Traveling Library.

The support of the people of the town and the church is desired to make this worthwhile. It is the desire of the young people to have something permanent.
