HUNTING SEASON OPENS MONDAY

Small Game of All Sorts Reported Plentiful This Season. Know the Law. Be Careful.

Sportsmen are brushing up on their "triggernometry" and calculus as hunting seasons opens, to save lives, a bulletin of the American Game Association points out.

For instance, what is the quickest way to get to Heaven in Hunting? Don't work this out. The Association gets the answer thru years of observation. It is: Drag a loaded gun, muzzle first, thru a fence! Several hunters prove this every year. Getting to Heaven is almost instantaneous in every case.

Another quick way, but not as sure, is to lean a loaded gun against a tree where dogs are playing about. The dogs may not knock it down, but chances are they will. If the charge misses the hunter it may kill a good dog.

A sure but slow way is to lay a loaded gun in the bottom of a boat, and then pick it up in excitement. Drowning takes longer, but it's as effective as a charge of shot thru the heart or head. Besides, it's hard on the bottom of the boat.

Another old favorite is the careless hunter who jumps ditches with his gun swinging from his hand or walks in deep snow with the barrel pointed downward. When he shoots, a gangster's pineapple couldn't do the job any better. He gets thousands of pounds of pressure burst in his face instantly; it's usually fatal. Gun barrels must be kept free of mud and snow and water, else the gun will explode when it is shot. And a good gun costs money.

There are a few other things the hunted can do that are hardly calculated to promote peace, good will and the pursuit of harpiness.

When game is lined up, pull the trigger, no matter what's beyond. The farmer's cow or pig doesn't mean much. He can get some pork sometime after the depression is over. Nevertheless, don't try it. Better see that nothing is in the line of fire if one doesn't want unhappy pursuit.

And how about shooting another hunter for a deer, or turker, or even a squirrel? It's being done every year by the looney who shoots at movement or a patch of color in the undergrowth; see clearly before shooting and spare the other fellow, the Association begs.

Every hunter should inform himself on both his state and federal hunting laws and regulations.

Here are some of the general principles of law that obtain in either every state where the law is federal or in nearly every state where the law is local. Besides, observing them is good sportsmanship.

It is against the law to—

Hunt without license.

Hunt from a power boat, automobile or airplane.

Hunt on any posted land without permission.

Hunt waterfowl with any gun larger than a ten-gauge.

Hunt waterfowl without federal waterfowl hunting stamp.

Hunt for hire or hire anyone to hunt.

Sell wild game alive or dead.

Shoot within specific distances of any public road.

There are but a few minor changes in the New York State game laws this year. The outstanding change is in the Federal duck season. In New York State you can hunt ducks on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays only, from October 4th to December 8th.

The pheasant season is the same as last year beginning on October 29th and closing November 3rd.

TEACHERS MEET IN WELLSVILLE

Annual Teachers' Conference of Allegany District and Districts 4 and 5 of Steuben Held This Week.

Between five and six hundred teachers of Allegany and Steuben counties met in Wellsville Wednesday and Thursday of this week, to attend the annual teachers' conference. The meetings were held in the auditorium of the high school and Christian Temple.

Among the prominent speakers at the conference were Dr. J. C. Morrison of Albany, assistant commissioner for elementary education, speaking on "Needed Changes in the Elementary Schools." Dr. Clyde B. Moore of Cornell on "European Schools at Work;" Dr. A. N. Jorgensen of the University of Buffalo, "The Teacher's Part in Supervision," and E. Wellington Taylor, Dean Graduate School of Business Administration, New York University, whose topic was "Opportunities and Responsibilities of the Teacher in Elementary and Secondary Education."

Addresses by Prof. Robert Green, Miss Clara Miller and Miss Louise Moran of Genesee Normal; Mr. Kellogg of Cornell and Miss Anna Kennedy of the State Department with the various sectional meetings completed the program.

Superintendent W. G. Pope of Andover was chairman of the Thursday afternoon session, and Principal Glenn E. Bretch of Andover High School was chairman of the administration section meeting.

COUNTY COURT IS ADJOURNED

No Cases Ready for Trial. Will Convene Again Next Monday, Oct. 15.—Judge Renwick Presiding.

The fall term of county court on Monday found no cases ready for trial when it convened, Judge Walter N. Renwick presiding. Two automobile negligence cases on the calendar were reported settled. The contest over the probate of the will of Ida Streeter and the slander action of William Doch vs. Abe Grossman were both adjourned until next Monday, October 15.

Elbert L. Schenck, 50 years old, laborer, single, Wellsville, pled guilty to driving while intoxicated as a second offender. He was arrested between Cuba and Friendship. Fortunately no one was hurt. This first drunken driving was in Wellsville in 1927. His attorney, William R. VanCampen of Belmont, made a plea for clemency on the ground that no one suffered because of the fault ty driving, because the man before the bar had never been accused of any other crime, and because he had been of material assistance to the district attorney's office four years ago in the case of "Slim" Hill, a tramp now in Auburn prison for the murder of Samuel Young, a fellow "knight of the road." The arrest of Hill and his later revelations broke up a gang of post office burglars who had entered 17 places in Wsetern New York, including the Hume post office. Sentencing of Schenck was deferred until next Monday.

The case of Edgar A. Wilber of Bolivar, who last Friday pleaded guilty to forgery, third degree, will be taken up next Monday when sentence will be pronounced. It is Wilbur's claim that the serving of a short sentence in Cayuga county in 1920, was for petit larceny, a misdemeanor, instead of for burglary and grand larceny as records show, a felony. Wilber tells officials he was indicted for the more serious charge, a felony, but was permitted to admit guilt in a lesser degree. If the first conviction was for a felony, the second admission of guilt to a second felony will make mandatory a much longer sentence. Wilber will be allowed to tell his story to a jury. William R. VanCampen of Belmont has been retained as his counsel.

All but one of the 36 jurors drawn for the term were in court. A number were excused from serving next week however.

James Wentworth went to school Monday morning spick and span in a brand new school bus.

The bus, a new Ford V-8 dual wheel chassis with a Wayne all-steel body, is a fine job and will insure the school children as safe and comfortable transportation as could be provided for them.

Mr. Wentworth draws 38 children from the Elm Valley school to Andover High School.

WORK FOR THE COUNTY'S CHILDREN

Annual Reports of Allegany County Public Health and Welfare Association Are Given at Meeting.

Annual reports to be given at the annual meeting of the Allegany County Public Health and Welfare Association, covering the work of Children's Court and of the probation officer, Mrs. Frank W. LeClere, friendship, have been prepared and your correspondent has been permitted to make extracts from them.

The probation officer is employed by the association and paid to a considerable extent by private gifts gathered by it. It's value has been recognized by the best citizens over the county who have continued to support its efforts thru its long existence. That the organization is materially helpful to the child life of Allegany county cannot but be sensed by the thoughtful person who reads and understands the reports given.

We quote verbatim from the report of the probation officer. The table of receipts should be self explanatory.

"We shall produce a much better and safer man when we make him self controlling by developing his sense of responsibility, than when we regulate him by law." Dr. L. B. Bailey.

"The cause of delinquency and maladjustment must be sought in the childhood experience of the individual. Judge Walter N. Renwick declares "the trouble is not with the children, but with the parents, the dirty, unclean, foul-minded parents." The social worker knows that these parents are often subnormal, often delinquent, usually grossly ignorant and always maladjusted and unable to stand up to life. The waste and injury done childhood in the breaking up of homes is unmeasurable. Lack of understanding of the laws of life or the preciousness of personality, poverty and discouragement lead to more or less futile attempts to deal with an unsatisfying reality. These things stunt and warp the human lives concerned. Society must seek to meet and combat the forces that defeat life, social effort must aim at enlightenment, encouragement, help and wherever necessary, change the baffling environment of people and places.

"The probation department tries to follow up the broken, failing personalities which come before the law. Wherever there is a chance that with supervision a delinquent person may change or improve his ways, that chance is given by placing the person on probation. The execution of many a sentence given in the court room is suspended pending good behavior, and the person is put on probation to the county probation officer. The adults and young people who appear before the judge receive instruction, and penalties imposed are not so much punishments as props to strengthen weakness in character and lead to more desirable behavior. Exterior enactments are necessary at first, but it has been the experience of the court that often a man, ashamed of the indictment of neglect, rouses unknown inner forces and proves his good manhood. Some people under the supervision of the probation officer and her staff gradually form new attitudes and habits that make for responsible, self reliant behavior in all relationships. The relationship between workers and clients is usually a friendly one. Often probationers seek help and advice.

"The probationers are cases of the Children's Court, and the courts of the justices of the county. In the case of juveniles the probation is delegated often to someone they admire and trust. The probation officer seeks by follow-up work to break the cycle of failure inherent in the life situation, and any success achieved is of incalcuable value to the future of society in our county. Thus roughly the work of the probation officer has been outlined to point up the values represented by the statistics in the following report. The stories of the individual clients and the methods of procedure used in the guidance in such case have not been mentioned. The case histories given in other connections will make clear the endless patience and the varied technique which are necessary to any lasting service to human need.

We regret that lack of space and time for typesetting forbids any extended review of the very interesting report of Children's Court. The report, without revealing exact names, tells the story graphically of many typical cases brought before Judge Renwick during the past year. Some of them read like chapters from a novel so packed are they with human interest.

In the work of Children's Court covering the year to Oct. 1, 1934, 253 persons were before the judge on various charges. Of this number 17 were delinquent boys, 11 delinquent girls. Of neglected dependents 62 were boys and 85 were girls. Six handicapped boys and one girl were helped. Of the adults dealt with 62 were men and nine were women.

Figures compiled from the last annual report issued by the state Department of Charities up to Oct. 1, 1933, showed that Allegany county led its five nearest neighbor counties in economy of net cost for care of dependent children under county children's agent supervision. The figures were: For Allegany, $4,439.59; Cattaraugus, $37,800.14; Genesee, $16,821.45; Livingston, $20,409.42; Steuben, $24,078.33; Wyoming, $7,618.56. The costs for Allegany county for this year, not yet compiled, have been practically the same as last year.

SMETHPORT MAN KILLED ON HIGHWAY

Charles Kinney Struck by Car Operated by Dr. O. E. Jones of Wellsville Near Chas. Lynch Home.

Charles W. Kinney, 29, died in the Jones Memorial hospital, Wellsville early Monday morning, from the effects of being struck by an automobile near the residence of Charles Lynch Sunday night.

Mr. Kinney, whose home is in Smethport, Pa., has been working for Melvin Mattison on his farm two and one-half miles west of Andover on the Andover-Wellsville highway for the past two or three months.

About 8:30 Sunday night he was returning to the Mattison farm from Andover on foot, when he was struck by an automobile driven by Dr. Olin E. Jones, dentist, of Wellsville. He was taken to the Jones Memorial hospital, Wellsville, in the Mulholland ambulance but never regained consciousness and died about 2:30 the next morning. An autopsy revealed that a fractured skull was the cause of his death. The remains were taken to Mt. Jewett for burial.

Mr. Kinney is survived by one brother and three sisters.

Sergeant Harold L. DeBrine of the state police and Coroner H. E. Cooley of Wellsville are investigating the accident. Kinney was not carrying a light and Dr. Jones claims to not have seen the man until the car struck him.

This particular stretch of Route 17 seems to have the jinx for Pennsylvanians from the vicinity of Smethport, as it was only a few yards from where Kinney was killed to the place of the bad wreck involving three Smethport people a month ago.
