George Frederick Handel

Handel was born in 1685 at Hallee, Germany. His father was a physician who had worked out for his son a career different from that of a musician. He was to study to be a physician and nothing else. So strong was the father's desire in this respect that the boy was not allowed to go to the public schools, lest he might hear and learn something of music. The boy's love for music could not be kept down, for at the age of seven he went into the garret, unbeknown to his father, where there was an old harpsichord and practiced constantly.

Handel's father had occasion to visit the Duke of Saxe-Weissenfels, and one day started without the boy who had pleaded to be taken. Handel started running after the carriage and was finally taken in. While on the visit the duke himself found young Handel playing the organ in such a style as to disclose remarkable genius. Thereupon the Duke urged the father not to neglect the boy's training and pressed his views so strongly that the elder Handel yielded.

Young Handel was then given severe training under a great teacher, Zachau. The whole range of existing musical literature was gone over by the boy under Zachau's direction.

After having passed thru this severe training, Handel was sent to Berlin to study opera, which became the absorbing passion of his life, for he wrote no less than 44 operas, continuing this line of composition for 21 years. At the age of 12 his father died, and he was left to shift for himself.

He was next found in Hamburg, playing violin in the orchestra of the opera house. It happened that one day the conductor was absent and young Handel, who took his place, conducted with such extraordinary efficiency that all were astonished, some of the musicians being violently seized with envy.

When he was 21 he settled in England. While there, his life was a busy one spent in composing, conducting and managing operas. The struggle was a long and bitter one. Handel wrote music in every form known to his day; however, his fame rests on his oratories. His style is more Italian and English than German.

Little is known of his love affairs, but no doubt he had them in his youth. He never married and gave most of his estate to charity.

Handel wrote his immortal work, "The Messiah," in his 57th year. He worked at this for 22 days.

At his death, at the age of 75, he left a fortune of over $100,000. During the last six years of his life, he was totally blind, a misfortune that quite overwhelmed him. His death occurred on Good Friday, April 13, 1759. He was buried in Westminister Abbey.

Andover Clergyman Attends Missionary Meet

Rev. H. E. Wilson, while in New York City last week, attended "The Congress of Bands" of the Missionary Training Institute of Nyack-on-the-Hudson. Services being held both in the morning and afternoon, which taxed to the utmost capacity the spacious Pythian Temple on 70th Street, New York City. These services were entirely conducted by students of the school, in interest of the mission fields, representing all 20 fields that the Christian and Missionary Alliance are now occupying today. The climax of both these services came when the appeal in the afternoon came and the vast throng of young people under 30 years of age, arose from their seats, indicating their complete surrender to their Lord and Master Jesus Christ, to go or do whatever or wherever He should call them.

1939 License Plates Will Bear World Fair Advertising

As a result of the resentment expressed about the World's Fair advertising on automobile license plates Charles A. Harnett, State Motor Vehicle Commissioner, states that the 1939 license plates will have larger numerals but will again bear the controversial advertising line, unless the law passed last year is repealed. Work on the 1939 license plates will start soon.

Asso. of Towns Adopts Important Resolutions

Asks State Legislature to Make Seven Changes in Present Laws, to Help Towns.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 25.—A number of important resolutions affecting town and county governments found adoption at the sixth annual meeting of the Association of Towns of the State of New York here yesterday morning. The resolutions, in brief, in the order in which they were passed, are as follows:

1—That the Legislature be requested to change the present law so that such parts of State-shared taxes, taken from the towns and given to the villages, may be restored to the towns which are responsible for the burden of relief.

2—That a bill be introduced in the Legislature amending the Vehicle and Traffic Law so that the State will reimburse the towns for all costs and expenses incidental to the prosecution of alleged violators, whether they are arrested by State police or by any other peace officer.

3—That the Association approve legislation permitting boards of supervisors to apply up to 50 per cent of the gasoline tax, apportioned the counties, in payment of interest and redemption of bonds issued in connection with the improvements of highways.

4—That the Association oppose any measures permitting the waters of the Great Lakes to be diverted and thus materially affecting the natural flow into the Niagara River, Niagara Falls and the St. Lawrence River.

5—That Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat's recommendation that the State, with its greater range of taxing power, take over financing of all home relief be endorsed in principle.

6—That the Association oppose legislation which would increase the amount of gasoline tax apportioned to the cities and villages of the State, consequently decreasing the amount now apportioned to the counties.

7—That the Association of Towns favor legislation providing that overvaluation shall not be deemed evidence of inequality in proceedings brought to review assessments

The resolutions committee was headed by Benjamin I. Taylor of Harrison, Westchester county; Geo. E. Gordon, Brighton; Ralph Hutchings, Fenton; Harrison D. Jennings, Long Lake; Llewellyn G. Smith, Hodman.

WAFTINGS from "Wandering Willie"

WITH the beginning of Lent on Ash Wednesday this week it brings to our mind how little is known by the people of Andover about Shrove Tuesday, the German Lutheran day for the beginning of Lent. This is supposed to be a day of merriment and the eating of "fastnacht," a bun or roll something similar to the "hot-cross" buns the people of the village are acquainted with.

Gleaning what information we could about "Shrove Tuesday," we find that many solemn and religious activities are connected with the day, ending with a solemn church service at midnight Tuesday, when "Ach Mitwoch" (Ash Wednesday) is greeted and the beginning of Lent began.

There are not many of the real German families around Andover who make "fastnacht." We have eaten them, along with other pastries that go with the Germans, including "kuchen," a combined cake and bread.

We would appreciate a letter from some one who knows more about Shrove Tuesday and the festivities of the day and would be glad to publish the same, as we are sure there are many Andoverites who would be as interested in this day as we are.

JUST "weiner," plain, honest-to-goodness "weiner" but rather a popular word around town the last of last week. The argument began some place down Rochester Avenue and spread around most of the rest of the burg as to whether it was spelled "ie" or "ei." We had several people tell us we were spelling it wrong while the other side of the argument patted us on the back and said we were right. Anyhow, we still stick to the spelling of that elongated hunk of ground what-you-may call it as "weiner."

A PERSON doesn't realize just how big a little town we have until someone else comes along and tells us about it. With a population of around 1,200 we wonder how they all make both ends meet. A fellow summed it all up the other day and we find we have six churches, six grocery stores, eight service stations, four garages, three beer places, one liquor store, two milk plants, two mills, five restaurants, one newspaper, four clothing or dry goods stores, three barber shops, four feed stores and oodles and oodles of different societies, clubs, orders etc., to go along with the rest of it. It would seem that with all the above we could easily brag about being the "littlest big town" or vice versa in the U. S. A.

Whatever may happen between now and Summer, we can't have many weeks of cold weather now.
