Father's Day, June 19th

DON'T forget to do something about Father's Day on June 19th. The cornerstone upon which our civilization rests, is in the family. The father who stands at the head—providing and protecting and the mother carrying on in duties of one cause, the business of father and mother in touch with interests on some common plane.

Sometimes in the stress of hard days, ambitions and hopes seem to disappear and leave a great empty void. But if that void can be filled with love, the hopes and ambitions always return. Love draws them. It has been shown down thru history that love rules the world. It is the salt of life and not the substance itself, and is governed by understanding.

You may be whatever you resolve to be. Determine to be something that will bring tribute and admiration to your father—"I can not" never accomplished anything—"I will try" has wrought wonders.

The badge of the day is a rose. White roses are worn for fathers who have died and persons whose fathers are living wear red roses.

Clothing From Paper

DURING the World War the Germans developed paper clothing, being unable to obtain enough cotton and wool to make clothes for the civilian population. Those "ersatz" garments proved so unsatisfactory, however, that as soon as the war was over, woven fabrics took their place.

In Japan for centuries a considerable proportion of the people have worn garments of various kinds, made of varnished or lacquered paper. Paper raincoats are common in Japan, and the Japanese paper umbrellas were once common in America, but only as umbrellas, not for protection against rain.

Now a new kind of paper fabric has been developed in this country and is shortly to be placed on the market for clothing of all kinds. It is already in use for other purposes, including pillow-cases. This new material, called Fewel, is made of wood pulp by a special process. It is neither spun nor woven. It is said to be soft, strong, as limp as silk, and has the appearance of pencil or cotton broadcloth. It can be dyed in almost any color or printed in patterns like dress fabrics. The inventor says that it can be made as cheaply as paper, so that a soiled clothing and other articles made from it can be thrown in the fire since there is no way of cleaning them.

We have not seen the new fabric, but it appeals to our imagination, like the woven glass fabrics which have also been made into dresses and even men's clothes. Like many other modern improvements, such things tend to lessen the demand for the old staples. We wonder what effect this newest one will have on the cotton growers.

Of all the things you wear, your expression is the most important

Plan a Vacation

THE average American takes a vacation of one form or another; perhaps only for a day, sometimes all summer; sometimes by a series of trips, but each owes it to himself to have some sort of a vacation. Oddly enough, the simplest and shortest vacations are often the most appreciated, and often the longest to be remembered. No matter where you live, there is always a lake, a shore, a mountain or a wooded spot nearby, beckoning you back to Nature. This vacation idea, getting close to Nature, is a wonderful thing for mankind. It means greater health and without health there is very little left.

In midsummer one lives out in the open. The skin has a chance to breathe and absorb the building and healing properties that fresh air and sun provide for the individual.

But one must remember that Old Sol's rays are mighty powerful during this portion of the year, and more harm than benefit is caused in a thoughtless mood when one has forgotten this precaution and comes forth with a lobster-red body. These wonderful coats of tan should be acquired gradually rather than all at once. The idea of a vacation is repair rather than impair. Life can hold so much—each golden hour can be packed full of living with just a little forethought and vigorous health.

Sure Proof

A GREAT many people in our country today as "classifiers." They like to break up the population of the United States into groups called "businessmen," "farmers," and "laborers." and then pretend that there is no relation between these groups.

Then they go on to say that, since the farmer and the businessman, for instance, have no common interest, the only way either can get ahead is at the expense of the other.

The falsity of this idea can be demonstrated very easily by a single example:

Every automobile contains 55 pounds of cotton, and enough additional cotton has been used during manufacture to bring the total consumption per car to nearly 100 pounds.

In a busy year, one large automobile company alone supports about 150,000 cotton-producing families. Isn't that sure proof of the interdependance of industry and agriculture---businessman and farmer?

"—and Nothing But the Truth"

NOT long ago in Washington, a Senator introduced a bill which would make it a punishable offense to publish in a newspaper or magazine any statement "known to be untrue."

That leads us to reflect how often labor difficulties in the past several years might have been reduced if the true facts of the case had always been adhered to, and the public allowed to look them over.

In Philadelphia recently, after hearing the facts of one such case, the presiding judge himself drew up the wording of the sign that the pickets could carry, making it part of an injunction that they should carry that sign and no other if he wanted to picket.

The text prescribed by the jurist read as follows:

"This establishment is not unfair to organized labor. It is being picketed because of a labor dispute between the Bartenders' Union, Local No. 115, and the employers of this establishment concerning what organization shall be their bargaining agent."

Wilton Lackaye was on the program for a speech at a gathering in Chicago. It was late in the evening, and everyone had been bored by the other long-winded speakers. When the toastmaster announced: "Wilton Lackaye, the famous actor, will now give you his address," Mr. Lackaye arose and said, "Toastmaster and Gentlemen: My address is the Lambs Club, New York." He sat down. The applause was tremendous.

Pat determined to pass his favorite tavern on his way home. As he approached it he became somewhat shaky, but after plucking up courage, he passed it. Then, after going about 50 yards, he turned, saying to himself: "Well done, Pat me bye. Come back and I'll treat ye."

Happiness in this world depends chiefly on the ability to take things as they come.

"Better fill 'er up, Son!"

HOW, WHAT AND WHY?

Special to the Andover News

The Andover News has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one postcard. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Can't Afford Sprayer

R. C., writes: "I have only about three acres of potatoes and can't afford to buy a spraying machine. Is there any good way you know to handle small acreages like this?"

Professor M. F. Barrus of the plant pathology department replies: "Growers who have less than five acres of potatoes can hardly afford to buy a machine satisfactory for spraying potatoes. Such growers should unite with several neighbors that have small acreages to form a spray ring.

"A minimum of 60 acres is considered necessary for a spray ring to operate economically. The cost of this spraying is usually less than that done individually, and has often proved to be more effective.

"Small growers who cannot get enough acreage for a spray ring, can dust potatoes with a hand duster. This is easier and more satisfactory than using a hand sprayer. The hand duster will also be useful in dusting cabbages, beans, celery, and other crops in small fields, as well as roses, hollyhocks, and other ornamentals grown in the garden and yard."

When Is Hay Cured?

H. B. asks: "Is there any test that will tell when hay is really cured and safe to store?"

Professor G. H. Serviss of the agronomy department answers: — "Hay is cured when it is dry enough to store in the mow with safety. There is no reliable quick test by which a farmer can determine this. The judgment of an experienced hay maker is the best indicator.

"Over curing at its worst will result in a loss of leaves and less feeding value. Under-curing at best will produce a moldy hay or brown hay, and at its worst may cost a man his barn.

"If for any reason it becomes necessary to put hay in the barn before it is thoroly cured, it should be spread out over a large part of the mow instead of being packed deep in one section."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a gigantic job. Their task is to rid the flowing blood stream free of its share of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—constantly produces these poisons. Healthy kidneys must remove them from the blood if health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headaches, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, and tired, worn out feeling.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbances.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are recommended by users everywhere. Ask at any store, and for sale all drug stores.

MARK TWAIN

Keeping the Big Bad Wolf Away

Are you in debt? Did you ever lose any money thru making a bad investment? Well, if so, you may find consolation in the fact that some of the most brilliant men who ever lived made fools of themselves when it came to investing money. Take Mark Twain for example. He had the ability to make the whole world laugh—or cry; yet when it came to investing money, he didn't have any more sense than you and I had—back in 1929.

He lost almost a hundred thousand dollars in all sorts of inventions, such as steam generators, marine telegraphs, and other marvelous machines that were going to revolutionize the printing industry. There was only one gadget that was too fantastic for Mark Twain to invest in, and that was a queer sort of contraption called a telephone. He was offered a whole halful of Bell Telephone stock but he turned it down with a snort—turned down a proposition that would have made him untold millions. Instead, he went into business with one of his relatives, and you know what that means. He lost everything but the kitchen stove.

His friend, H. H. Rogers, of the Standard Oil Company, offered to pay his debts on the basis of 50 cents on the dollar, but Mark Twain wouldn't hear of it. His admirers started a national subscription, and checks came pouring in from all over the country; but Mark Twain returned every one of the contributions and insisted on paying his debts himself. It despised lecturing, yet he made a trip around the world, lecturing and living in hotels, suffering from homesickness and boredom. He devoted six years of his life to paying his debts, but he finally paid them.

General Grant was brilliant enough to conquer Lee, win the Civil War, and become President of the United States; but he wasn't smart enough to keep out of Wall Street. During the last years of his life, two sharpers got hold of Grant, and persuaded him to go into business with them. Then these men used Grant's good name to manipulate all sorts of crooked deals. When the crash came, Grant, in order to pay his debts, handed over his farm, his houses in Philadelphia and New York, and even the swords and trophies that had been presented to him.

He didn't have a dollar, and he was dying of cancer. He realized that when he was dead, his widow would be poverty-stricken. So, in order to provide for her, he decided to write his memoirs. He dictated until the cancer in his throat got so bad he couldn't speak. Then he finished the book with a pencil—finished it while he was suffering agony. He wrote the last chapter only three days before he died. Mark Twain published the book, and paid Mrs. Grant almost half a million dollars in royalty.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln got so deeply in debt that she had to sell her dresses and furs and jewels. After she left the White House, she was so pressed for cash that she even sold her dead husband's shirts with his initials worked on them.

Abe Lincoln, as a young man, went into the grocery business with a drunkard as a partner. The store failed, the drunkard died; and left Lincoln all the debts to pay. There was a legal loophole of escape and Lincoln could have avoided paying all these debts if he had wanted to. But that wasn't Lincoln's way. He scraped and saved and sacrificed for eleven long, hard years until he paid his creditors every dollar that he owed, and he paid them with interest.

4-H Canning Contest Enters Tenth Year; Offers Special Award

The National 4-H Canning Contest conducted under supervision of the Agricultural Extension Service of the various states celebrates its tenth anniversary this year by supplementing the usual awards with a 25-quart pressure retort to each alternate state winner.

Over 225,000 girls and about 1,000 boys are estimated to be enrolled this season in canning activities, which are expected to produce for home consumption and exhibition 8,000,000 jars. Many of these clubsters also carry garden and fruit growing projects, which have roundly 220,000 enrolled and yield 1,000,000 bushels of produce for canning and sale.

All regularly enrolled canning clubsters in the state are eligible to enter the contest which requires only that they fill out a form provided by their leaders on the amount canned, exhibits, contests and related activities.

Each county winner is awarded a handsome gold medal, the state victor receives an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress to be held in Chicago early in December, and college scholarships totaling $1,000 will be presented the four sectional winners and national winner thru the Kerr Glass Corporation, which has supported the contest from the start.

CHRISTIAN AND MISSIONARY ALLIANCE

Rev. H. E. Wilson, Pastor

Sunday School at 1:45 p. m. We are drawing to a close the studies in the book of the Gospel According to Saint Mark, which have been enticing and ever increasing in interest and Christian zeal. Lesson for this Sunday is: "The Suffering Servant," (Mark 15) Classes for both young and old.

Afternoon worship at 3 p. m. A message by the pastor. Topic, "Like a Lightning Flash." Text: "I saw Satan fall like a lightning flash," This Sunday is missionary Sunday and we shall hear tidings direct from the mission fields. We extend a hearty and cordial invitation to all to spend this time with us.

Evangelistic service at 7:30 p. m. An old fashioned service. Topic, "The Real Issue of Today." We extend a hearty invitation to all to come and hear of the most important thing in life, even to the necessity of living, as Christ said, "Ye must be born again."

Old fashioned mid-week prayer and Bible study on Thursday evening, 7:30 p. m., at the home of Miss Margaret Grossman, Rochambeau avenue. We are in the midst of a very interesting study in the Epistle to the Romans and will begin the "Doctrine of Salvation" as given to us in this Pauline epistle. Topic: "The Believer Made Holy," (Romans 6:1-23). This study followed by a season of prayer.

Friday evening the young people will hold their meeting at the home of George Geary at 7:30. Leader will be Mrs. Geary and the topic is the third in the series of "The Christ of the Bible"—"The Humanity of Jesus Christ" (Luke 2:39-52).

Adults, the younger folks cordially invite you to come and enjoy these very interesting studies with them, and please bring Bibles, pencils and paper.

1937 Gasoline Taxes Reach New High

New York motorists last year paid a record high of $61,841,000 in gasoline taxes to the state, an increase of 11.2 per cent over 1936, when $55,634,000 was paid, Edward D. Gray, secretary of the New York Petroleum Industries Committee, announced this week. The figures showing the substantial gain in gasoline taxes in 1937 are taken from the annual report of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads.

Best County Correspondent

Mrs. Edna Eaton Wilson, a farmer's wife of Ripley, Okla., has been judged the best country newspaper correspondent of 1938, it was announced by Wheeler McMillen, editorial director of the Country Home magazine, which sponsors the annual award.

Mrs. Wilson, who writes a column of farm and community news for the Stillwater Gazette, sums up her journalistic creed briefly: "I am interested in writing the good things about my neighbors and have not written scandals. The duty of the country correspondent, I think, is to sell her neighborhood and not to sell it short."

As the winner, Mrs. Wilson will receive $500 in cash, and a free trip to New York, Washington, and White Springs, W. Va.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food does't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A sluggish bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c. Stubbornly refuse anything else.
