Education in the National Life

(Report of the Advisory Committee on Education)

TODAY the American people are better able than ever before to educate their children. Altho the child population has doubled since 1880, the population of adults has increased more than three-fold in the same period, and the prospect is for a continued decline in the ratio of children to adults.

Under these circumstances the President's Advisory Committee on Education surveys the present needs and the present administrative machinery.

"Some 2,500,000 children of school age in the United States are handicapped in some way that necessitates facilities in addition to those provided for other children. Not more than 325,000 are receiving the attention necessary to make their education a success. A majority of the children with defects of sight, hearing, speech, and other functions can be made capable of supporting themselves and of living useful lives in the community if they are given a fair chance to obtain an education. To neglect this opportunity, as is now being done in most of the cases, is to impose an unfair burden on the children themselves and an expense on the community thruout their lives. Twenty-six states have laws concerning special classes for some types of handicapped children, but no state is providing funds large enough to meet the requirements. In rural areas the available information indicates that practically nothing is being done in the way of providing suitable education for these children."

Some overlapping is noted as, for example, in the work of vocational rehabilitation which is undertaken both by the Children's Bureau and by the Vocational Rehabilitation Service. A nation wide survey is recommended to determine the extent of needs for vocational rehabilitation, the best methods of meeting them and the cost of an adequate program. Noting the success of the President's Inter departmental Committee on Public Health and Welfare under the chairmanship of Miss Roche, this committee recommends the establishment of similar facilities "for co-ordination of the educational activities of the several agencies of the Federal Government."

The important work of the 4 H clubs is commended tho the common practice of accepting and even of soliciting contributions from individual business enterprises is criticized because in some cases "the organizations providing prizes have been primarily concerned with advertising ideas and the purchase of good will." Attention should be given to the co-ordination of this work with that of the public school system. Health News

"The war debts situation is calm" observes a senator. Yes calm, but uncollected.

The G-Men Score Again

BUT for the work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the kidnapping and death of the little Cash boy in Florida might have remained an unsolved mystery. Anyone who has followed the work of the "G-Men" since the enactment of the "Lindy Law" giving them jurisdiction in cases involving kidnapping for ransom, must have acquired a great respect for this trained corps of criminal investigators and their chief, J. Edgar Hoover.

We have not at hand the full list of kidnapping mysteries in which the work of the "G-Men" has resulted either in the recovery of the victim alive or in the swift detection and punishment of the criminals, but it is a long and impressive list. It is to be hoped that it will soon be added by the apprehension of the scoundrels who are responsible for the death of the kidnapped Levine boy in New Rochelle.

Kidnap cases are only one phase, and a comparatively minor one, of the public service which the "G-Men" perform. Their relentless war on gangsters, racketeers, holdup men and bank robbers has resulted in a sharp decrease in the number of such crimes. The underworld has come to understand that the F. B. I. means business, and to dread it accordingly.

There should be no withholding of funds from the "G-Men" because some politicians are jealous of the publicity which they and their leader receive. If it were not for newspaper co-operation in telling the world of their good work, they would not have become such a terror to evil-doers as they are. And to try to handicap them because some political leader wants to put his own henchman into Mr. Hoover's job seems to us almost as despicable as anything any kidnapper has done.

"Come Seven!"

THERE is a certain magic in the number seven. In "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" that seems to everybody to be exactly the right number of dwarfs. Somehow the human race, from time immemorial, has come to regard seven as a mystical number, with a peculiar significance which no other number has.

Great poets and authors have written verses and books based on the magic number seven. The Bible, is filled with examples, from the first chapter of Genesis, when God rested on the seventh day after the Creation, to the Revelation of St. John the Divine, with its vision of seven angels with seven vials filled with the seven plagues. Almost as ancient as Holy Writ are the legends of the Seven Wise Men and the Greek myth of the Seven Pleiades. The Seven wonders of the World have been traditional for thousands of years.

In the teachings and traditions of the Church we find the Seven Chief Virtues contrasted with the Seven Deadly Sins, the legend of the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus and the Seven Champions of Christendom. In the theological system of the Jewish Cabala there are Seven Heavens; and the Bar might be extended infinitely.

We don't know and we have never found anyone who does know why the number seven should figure so prominently in the folklore and legends of all races. But we are firm believers in the magic of the Seven Dwarfs. To bring a fairy tale to life and make real personalities out of colored pictures is so alluring that even the legendary magicians of ancient times could not do it.

Auto Models

LATEST advices from Detroit are that 1939 models, to be shown in November, may not be so radically changed as heretofore expected. Reason is that curtailment of auto buying this year has created a potential demand for new cars which could make itself felt at the first sign of business recovery without recourse to the added sales stimulant that unusual new designs might give. Businessmen watch auto production figures closely. For the automobile industry is the biggest customer of many other industries. Last year, when 5,000,000 cars and trucks were produced, 3,725,000 carloads of freight were provided American railroads. The motor industry buys 18 per cent of America's steel output, 73 per cent of plate glass, 11 per cent of copper, 36 per cent of lead, 12 per cent of aluminum, 28 per cent of nickel, 46 per cent of upholstery leather and nine per cent of the U. S. cotton output.

HOW, WHAT AND WHY?

Special to the Andover News

The Andover News has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one postcard. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

What's the Difference

K. S., inquires: "What's the difference between an ice, a sherbet, and ice cream? I've had plenty of all three, and ice cream seems the richest."

Professor W. E. Ayres of the dairy department answers: "As these products are made today, ices are the simplest of the three. They are simply sweetened, flavored, and colored water which has been frozen, and which may or may not contain fruit juices.

"Sherbets contain some milk solids. They may contain no butterfat, tho whole milk is generally used in preparing them. Essentially they are frozen milk or milk and water mixtures.

"Ice cream, on the other hand, is a more concentrated product. It has from ten to twenty per cent butterfat and usually contains from eight to twelve per cent of milk solids not fat.

"The most important difference in these products is that an ice contains no milk solids, ice cream is a very concentrated form of milk solids, and sherbet is about half way between the two. It is sometimes called a form of frozen milk."

Probably Termites

Mrs. S. E. C. writes: "Can you tell us what the insect is that is eating the timbers on our house? About three weeks ago on warm sunny days they appeared about four small flying ants which seemed to be shedding their wings. We also cut down an old plum tree near the house, and it was full of what looked like white ants."

"Professor R. W. Leiby of the entomology department replies:

"Your letter indicates an infestation of a portion of your house and plum tree by termites.

"A circular has been sent you which tells how to get rid of them and how to recondition part of the house destroyed."

Hann Reunion

The Hann reunion was held at Island Park, Wellsville, Sunday, June 19th. A picnic dinner was enjoyed by about 80 members, followed by a business meeting and social time.

The officers elected for the coming year were: President, B. B. Hann; vice president, Oliver Kemp; secretary and treasurer, Miss Bernice Leonard. It was voted to hold the next reunion the third Sunday in June, 1939 at the same place.

Members were present from Wellsville and Olean. Those from Andover were Mr. and Mrs. John Lever, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Hann, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Kemp, Miss Marian Swarts, Mrs. A. M. Wood and daughter, Miss Margaret Wood.

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

She Wrote Mystery Stories – So the Ghosts Decided to Move Right In

Millions of people have read the stories of Mary Roberts Rinehart. She has written 44 books and thousands of pages of magazine fiction; yet she started writing when she was the mother of three babies—not because she cared about fame, but because she was driven frantic by debts.

The first story she ever sold brought $34; but editors are glad to pay $34,000 now for one of her serials. She is one of the most highly paid authors in America and also one of the most prolific; yet she says that "writing is sheer, grinding drudgery."

She once sold big bundles of her stories to the movies for $75 a bundle; but later on, she refused an offer of $50,000 a year to go to Hollywood and write stories for the screen.

Mrs. Rinehart was tortured by an apparently unending siege of operations. But she kept right on writing in beds and wheel chairs and in hospitals.

Mary Roberts Rinehart has often remarked that, if she hadn't had so much "time to kill" in bed, she would never have written so many books.

Then, suddenly, with the swiftness of a tornado, she was overwhelmed by a financial catastrophe. It was the old old story. Wall Street! Too many stocks! Thin margins! A panic! Everything lost in a day!

Then, one evening, Doctor Rinehart, home from a sick call and pale as a sheet, told his wife that he had lost his memory and in spite hereof a young man again like the girl his wife was a stranger to him and he laughed when he was told that the children running about the house were his own.

The case fascinated Mrs. Rinehart; so she sat down that very night and wrote it into a short story, and mailed it to Munsey's Magazine; and to her surprise, the magazine not only accepted the story and sent her a check for $34 but also a letter asking for more stories.

Yet, one year from the time that Mary Roberts Rinehart started out to write she had sold 45 stories and made more than $1,800 dollars, a remarkable feat.

Shortly after Boise Penrose died, the Rinehart family moved into his apartment in Washington, and Mrs. Rinehart occupied the room in which he died. Immediately strange things began to happen.

The bell in the bedroom rang repeatedly when no one was near. Doors swung slowly open when no one was behind them. Birds and bats mysteriously appeared in her room when the door and the windows were locked and there was no chimney thru which they could enter.

Mrs. Rinehart was alarmed. She began to sleep fitfully. A friend who was a spiritualist advised her to speak to the spirits and ask what they wanted and what she could do to help them.

The next night, a living room window closed itself, apparently without any earthly aid; so Mrs. Rinehart crept out of bed, edged into the living room and then spoke in a frightened, trembling voice to the spirits from another world.

Instantly, a bell started ringing down the hall, ringing and clattering like a fire alarm.

She was frightened almost into hysterics until she suddenly realized that she herself was leaning against the bell button on the wall.

Mrs. Rinehart doesn't believe in ghosts. She doesn't believe that the spirit of Boise Penrose was haunting the house. But to use her own words: "There were times, I admit, when I wondered if some small imp from an invisible world was playing and frolicking among us."

DISH FOR THIS WEEK

Dough for ice-box rolls can be mixed in a short time and stored in the refrigerator indefinitely, ready to make fresh hot rolls for special treats or unexpected guests.

Ice Box Rolls

½ cup of shortening
½ cup of sugar
1 pint of milk
1 cake of yeast
1½ quarts of flour
1 tablespoon of salt
½ cup of warm water
3 eggs.

Scald the milk, and let cool to luke warm. Dissolve the yeast cake in the warm water with the sugar. Add this mixture to the milk. With this, mix one-half of the flour; then add the shortening and eggs.

Mix this well with the remaining flour. Cover the container and put in the ice box until it is needed. When ready to bake, pinch off as many rolls as needed and put them in greased pans. Let them stand three to four hours to raise; then bake in a hot oven (about 400 degrees Fahrenheit) for about 20 minutes. This recipe makes four dozen small rolls.

For a Sunday or "company" dinner, the New York State College of Home Economics suggests: ham and pineapple grill, creamed potatoes, buttered spinach, tomato and lettuce salad, hot buttered rolls, lemon ice-box pudding, milk at least for the children and coffee for the grown ups if desired.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

Please bring your Bibles and pencil and paper.

The place of the Young People's meeting will be in the open air. We will meet at the home of Mrs. M. Walton on North Main street at 5 o'clock and assemble there and walk out to the place of meeting on Grove street. If one should not be able to leave at this time and should desire to come at a later time, if the pastor is contacted the arrangements will be made to get you to the meeting. It will be a time of a "hot dog roast" and a gathering around a campfire with singing and testimonies. The younger folks give the older folks a very cordial invitation to make a special effort to join with them on this occasion.

George S. Tillman Honored at Manlius

George S. Tillman, son of Roxa Hann Tillman and grandson of E. L. Hann of Norwich, former Andover residents, earned unusual honors at Manlius. We are pleased to reprint the following article telling of his achievements, from the Norwich Sun:

Manlius, N. Y., June 18.—George Sherwood Tillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving D. Tillman, 7 Terrace street, Norwich, N. Y., received the high honor of being the only Manlius Cadet to be awarded the bronze shield of Companion in the Order of the Phoenix three times during the 69th annual commencement exercises at the Manlius school here today. For the virtue of being three times gazetted as Companion, Cadet Tillman, as further honor, received the silver insignia as Officer in the Phoenix Order, being decorated by Col. Guido F. Verbeck, headmaster of the school.

The four awards were based on "loyalty and interest in the Manlius school, and outstanding achievement within the Manlius school or in public life." The Order of the Phoenix is the highest citation awarded by the school and is adjudged by the Phoenix Board for decoration at graduation time. Cadet Tillman is the only Manlius pupil to receive four decorative shields.

The citations, read by Col Verbeck, said: "For attention to duty, good conduct and ability, classifying him as the best Cadet Private in his company.

"For having completed the school year in a scholastic average above the honor grade mark.

"For his excellent voluntary work as sports reporter and for discharging his duties with efficiency, willingness and faithfulness.

"By virtue of being three times gazetted as companion, we make this award. Officer in the Order of the Phoenix."

Cadet Tillman is a member of Headquarter Company, a member of the school band, feature editor of the school paper, and a member of this year's graduating class.

Tullar Annual Benefit Game Next Wednesday

Andover residents are invited once more to join with Wellsville fans in enjoying the year's biggest sports event of Allegany county—the annual night benefit game on Tullar field in Wellsville.

This year's night program, the third annual baseball show for the benefit of the lighting fund, will take place under the bright arclights of the Wellsville ball park on Wednesday night, June 29th, or in the event of rain, on the following night.

The highlight of the program will be the first meeting this year of the Sinclair ball club of Wellsville with the crack Easter Brands, one of Buffalo's classiest semi-pro clubs.

In addition to the night baseball, there will be an exhibition of the training of championship dogs of the Messer-Dusenbury kennels under their trainer, Roy Strickland. Music will be furnished by the Wellsville concert band.

Larry Howe Takes Up Odd Vocation

Larry Howe, of Belmont, well known to many News readers, has State and Federal permits to trap and band birds for the purpose of scientific study.

While this work is new in this section, it has been carried on for a number of years in this country and Canada. There are over 2,900 stations doing this work under the supervision of the Biological Survey Department of Agriculture.

No Deer Season in Livingston or Wyoming

There will be no deer hunting in Livingston and Wyoming counties this year. An order to this effect was signed June 17th by Conservation Commissioner Lithgow Osborn, following receipt of petitions for additional protection, and public hearings in both counties recently.
