Peach of a Crop

Peach crop prospects are even brighter now than a month ago. Latest reports are that the New York yield will be more than two million bushels, which is about 100 thousand bushels more than the estimate last month.

Early varieties of peaches are now being marketed throughout the state, but most consumers will need to wait until the Elberta crop ripens to get peaches to preserve.

Peak marketing periods for the Elberta crop are expected to begin as follows: Hudson Valley area, about the first of September; Central New York, shortly after the first of September; and western area of state, near the middle of September.

Since the production of apples and pears is still below average, peaches can be used for breakfast, dinner and supper. Can or freeze the surplus for next winter.

Remove Fish Odors

Are you one of those women who doesn't serve fish often because you do not like the smell it leaves in the kitchen, on the dishes, and on your hands? Then you'll be interested in this suggestion from the College of Home Economics at Cornell.

Soak the dishes in salt water first, then wash them in hot watter and salt—without soap. When you rinse off the salt, the fish smell goes with it.

Green Tea Coming Back

Green tea, missing during the war, will soon be back on the market. Our military forces have found stocks of fine quality green tea in Japan, and arrangements are now being made to ship some to this country.

Summer Storage Tip

Have the leather gloves and purses that you tucked away in a drawer for the summer begun to gather mildew? If so, here's how to protect them. First, remove any mold that may have appeared, and dry the gloves or purse thoroughly in the sun and air. Then wrap the leather items first in tissue paper, then in waxed paper, and store them in a dry place.

Fight Food Waste

It's been said Americans waste more food in their homes than this country ships overseas.

Here are the actual figures for 1945. Food waste in the home averaged seven and a half per cent of America's total food production last year. Food shipments abroad during 1945 equalled only seven per cent.

It's obvious from the comparison that one way to make more food available to the hungry people of the world is to cut food waste at home. You'll feel better for doing it.

Bend, Don't Stretch

When it comes to testing jar rubbers before you use them for canning, the secret is to bend, not stretch them. Canning experts at Cornell say you should test the ring by doubling it over on itself once and pressing it between the thumb and finger. If the rubber is a good one, when you let it go, it should spring back to its original shape. Rubbers that are stretched or cracked prevent an air-tight seal on the jar and cause food spoilage. So use new rubbers on your jars, and check each one carefully.

Producers Want Milk Amendment

New York, Aug. 27.—Dairymen have approved the proposal that New York's federal and state milk marketing orders be temporarily amended to reflect current market prices for milk and other dairy products, Dr. C. J. Blanford, administrator of the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Area announced Monday night.

The United States Department of Agriculture proposed the temporary amendment late last week and issued it for approval by at least two-thirds of the producers who supply the New York market.

"Representatives of more than the required number of producers have indicated their approval of the amendment to me and the formal approval of each producer representative and the requests of those who want the amendment retroactive have been forwarded to the Secretary of Agriculture."

The temporary amendment would set the price of Class 1-A, fluid milk, at $5.02 per hundredweight; the price of Class 11-A, fluid cream, at $3.95 per hundredweight, and the price of Class 11-B, storage cream, at 25 cents above the price of Class 11-E, which is fluid cream and ice cream sold in New England.

"The temporary amendment would guarantee to dairymen their full share of the price increases on milk and other dairy products since the expiration of price controls on June 30," Dr. Blanford said. "It would also obviate the necessity for continuance of the voluntary agreement under which dealers have been paying a premium to producers."

A permanent amendment to the marketing orders is now being prepared by the Department of Agriculture and will be submitted to producers for approval at a later date.

Establish Laboratories to Study Mastitis

Expansion of the educational and research work on bovine mastitis is underway in New York State with a grant of $74,600 from the state legislature. Work is to be conducted by the New York State Veterinary College at Cornell where fundamental work on mastitis has been done for many years.

Four regional laboratories will be established in East Aurora, Kingston, Canton, and Farmingdale, to serve all sections of the state, each to be operated by a field veterinarian, a laboratory technician, and a stenographer. The Ithaca laboratory will be expanded to include a veterinary bacteriologist and other personnel.

The plan also calls for the establishment of a local advisory committee for each field laboratory to be composed of outstanding dairymen and veterinarians in that area. Meetings of veterinarians and dairymen will be held at which the most modern methods used in determining causes of mastitis under actual farm conditions will be demonstrated.

U. S. M. C. Enlistments Accepted For Two Years

Major V. E. Diehl, Officer in Charge of U. S. Marine Corps Recruiting for the Buffalo District, announces that under present law, men must enlist before October 6, 1946 to become eligible for the benefits offered under the "G. I. Bill of Rights." Enlistments for two, three or four years are still being accepted. Enlistments for Aviation Duty only however, are for three and four years. It is expected that two and three year enlistments will be accepted for a limited time only inasmuch as enlistments prior to World War II were for four years.
