Harvey - Inc.

Harvey was here for only half an hour last Friday and it was quite early in the morning. He had just time to drive me to school and help me carry my books to my locker.

As we rode past the church that is nearly across the street from the school, he remarked how queer and unrespectful a certain bunch of boys appeared as they crowded each other on the church steps cursing and smoking. Some of them even looked as though they should practice it at home a few more times before they started puffing in public. A small, unexperienced smoker looks utterly ridiculous when he is attempting to serenely smoke in public.

As we parked in front of A. C. S. two bicyclists whizzed by, nearly running into a group of students. Also, a few more on bikes turned carelessly from Elm street on to the black top, just missing a small girl who ran up the walk and into the school. It seems our bicyclists quite often take over the walks and crosswalks as well as the roads. My escort thought it very queer but made no further remarks.

Walking up the walk to the door, he commenced "reminising" of the old days. I didn't quite gather what he meant so I asked him if he meant his school days. "Well, no, not necessarily," he mused. "I was just thinking about Thanksgiving—how I used to go to school the day before and try to think of all the things I had to be thankful for like getting out of school for another day; getting away with hookey the day before last, finding my old slingshot in Mrs. Jones' desk, and many other things." He continued as he opened the door for me, "but now, as I think back, I see how silly, yet how precious, those little things were. They meant a lot to me, but now I can list many big things that meant loads to me and many other people such as our free country, our rights to worship, speech, meet, assemble and print plus the right to unanimously select our leaders as we think best but," as we deposited the books in my locker, "now I'm afraid I must take the freedom of moving on."

Harvey seemed in a very sad state as he turned away and as I took my coat off I called him back and asked what was troubling him. "Oh," he sighed, "it's just I've no place to go or no one to be with on Thanksgiving and —oh, well!" As he started down the stairs I softened and asked him to our dinner. I guess I ought to be thankful I've many friends and relatives as do we all, so Harvey will be with friends Thursday, anyway.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if every American family could have some European child as a guest this Thursday? Let's all contribute generously to the food and clothing drives coming up and a beautiful Thanksgiving to you all.

Favorite Sayings

Here a few expressions heard frequently around the halls of our Alma Mater:

Ruth Bostick—Oh, fudge.

Madge Collins—I wish I'd get a letter.

Lila Childs—Doris, how many times did you return the carriage? (heard in typing lab period.)

Helen Yannie—Say hello to Johnny for me.

Doris Wintemberg — Well really.

Phyllis Mascho— (Doesn't say anything.)

Jo Ann Theetge—I can't figure out why I didn't get a letter.

Ducky Herring — I just love cats.

Earl Gross—These women!

Pat Dolan—Gee, I wish Leslie were here.

Rosemary Baker—I got only ninety-five.

Teddy Van Curen — I don't like your brushcut. (To Dick, of course.)

Eadie Dunham—I wish Wayne were here.

Larry Hoyt—Who, me?

Lois Honegger — Gee, that Duane Hackett is cute.

Dick Wheaton—Why stand up when you can lay down?

Earl Richardson — I didn't have time to get it done.

Phyllis Burdick—Oh, my soul!

Dolores Snyder—Honestly ! !

Brothers Under The Skin

Doris VanCuren

I'm sure there isn't a one of us who hasn't at some time or other spoken of those people of the Jewish faith as "cheaters." Maybe not outright but we have said things which implied as much. We never stop to think of the equal number of other Americans who are out for every penny they can get, nor do we stop to think that many of us would do the same thing if we thought we could get away with it.

Another instance of our predjudice is our feeling toward the Negroes of our country. We speak of them as "dirty niggers" and the like and never stop to realize it was our white race that brought them here. It seems they were all right while they were in bondage, but after that we refused to think of them as anywhere near our equal. Actually are they any different than we are down under the skin? Do they not have feelings, too?

These are only two of the many instances of our predjudice toward our fellow men. When I hear someone speak against someone of a different religious faith or of a different race I often wonder what they would do and how they would feel if they were to find themselves greatly outnumbered in a group of those people and hear one jeering at them. Would they not feel hurt?

Today few of us stop to think how the other fellow must feel when he hears some of our cutting remarks. We do not put ourselves in their places, nor realize we are all humans fighting for our happiness, freedom and, yes, our very existance. We must remember we are all brothers under the skin.

In the Black

Along a country road came a $7,000 limousine. As it caught up with the small car its owner could not resist the temptation to slow down and jolly the other driver a bit.

"Heavens, man," he said "what is it about your car that makes such a dreadful rattling sound?"

"That?" came the reply. "Oh, that's $6,500 jingling around in my pocket."

Patent leather shoes should not be worn in very cold weather because it makes them brittle.
