Miss Shepard to Speak at Andover Baptist Church

Miss Eva Shepard, for a number of years past a missionary in Belgian Congo, Africa, will speak on her work, experiences and the habits of the people of Belgian Congo at the Andover Baptist church Thursday evening, April 1st, to which the public is cordially invited.

Miss Shepard, who is home on leave from Africa, will be remembered as the daughter of the late Rev. A. D. Shepard, former pastor of the Andover Baptist church.

Ithaca Man Injured When Auto Hits Tree

Richard Dixon of Ithaca suffered cuts of the face, hands and knees, his front teeth broken and shock when the Plymouth sedan he was driving failed to make the Barney-Elm street corner and crashed a maple tree in front of the Vickers residenc about 1 o'clock Monday morning.

He was taken to the office of Dr. S. B. Scott where he was treated and later taken to Hotel Joyce by officers Albert Rogers and Harold Rice, who investigated the accident. The car was badly damaged.

Legion Auxiliary Sick Room Equipment Arrives

Additional items, including adjustable crutches for use in home sick rooms have arrived and with the hospital bed are now available for use by the general public. There is no charge for the use of these articles and Andover people are urged to feel free to ask for the use of them at any time they are needed. Contact either Mrs. Kenneth Vars or Mrs. Norman Drew.

Basketball Players Feted

A turkey dinner was served in the Andover Central School cafeteria Tuesday evening by the mothers of the varsity and junior varsity basketball teams of the Andover central school with their cheerleaders. The color scheme for the tables and decorations of the cafeteria were carried out in the school colors of purple and white, place cards being miniature crowns for the players and megaphones for the cheerleaders with silver basketballs at the guests' places. The decorations were the work of Larry Bartz, art instructor here.

Principal James H. Kessler acted as master of ceremonies, calling on Murlyn Conde and Lynford Chaffee of the faculty, who were speakers of the evening. Mr. Kessler also addressed the boys and commended them on their fine record for the season in taking top honors in their section.

At the close of the evening Coach Chaffee was presented a pigskin wallet by the honored guests.

Rev. MacDougald Lauds Book By Muriel Sheppard

We read with delight Muriel Earley Sheppard's first book, "Cabins In the Laurel." We reflected upon the time it must have taken to gather the information and the material that made possible its writing. We enjoyed its profuse and interesting illustrations.

Differing very materially in its content and composition we have found Mrs. Sheppard's latest book, "Cloud By Day," no less interesting. Its reading was informative as well as entertaining. We found it richly embellished with illustrations of the locality, the characters and the industry with which it deals. The fact that Mrs. Sheppard was born and grew up in Andover and remains so well known here should cause our people to have a certain and considerable pride in each one of these productions. This, furthermore, should enhance interest in their reading.

Most clever is Mrs. Sheppard in choice of title for her recent writing. The allusion is to the Bible. The Children of Israel were being led out of the Egyptian bondage to another land of promise. They were to follow the cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night. By some such inspiration were the discoverers and pioneers guided to this American land of promise. Especially is this true with reference to the particular section of Pennsylvania from which Mrs. Sheppard gleaned the material for the writing of her book. Anyone who has visited that section of Pennsylvania and has seen, from some little distance the furnace belching forth its cloud (of smoke) by day and its pillar of fire by night grasps the significance of the allusion and is reminded of the richness of this land of promise.

Mrs. Sheppard is fortunate in the writing of her book in having for her husband one who is a mining engineer. The lay mind unaided, could hardly grasp and consequently record the knowledge of the mining industry which is presented in the book. And the extensive bibliography in the back part of the book bears witness to the scope of research work done in its preparation. Mrs. Sheppard is furthermore indebted to the inheritance from her father of a legal mentality which made it possible for her to grasp and record the judicial proceedings in which a leading character of the book became involved.

A considerable portion of the book is devoted to a consideration of J. V. Thompson. Enviously powerful eyes looked upon the very valuable Connellsville section of sub soil which J. V. Thompson posssessed, the richest in all of Pennsylvania for the transformation into coke. Powerful interests, taking advantage of Mr. Thompson's financial embarrassment, at a time when the help of a million dollars from his wife "Honey", could have saved him, by hook or by crook, legal or otherwise, he lost this valuable mining property.

However, different individuals may have looked upon J. V. Thompson, according to the record, he seems to have been a man with a considerable part of goodness in his makeup. He helped young people, financially, through school; he invested the money of people he knew where there was good promise of re-
