Set March 21-24 Dates For 1949 Farm and Home Week

March 21-24 have been selected as the dates for Farm and Home Week at Cornell University next year.

The announcement by Deans W. I. Myers of the College of Agriculture and E. Lee Vincent of the College of Home Economics said the action was based on a favorable experience with a spring event this year.

The period March 21-24 is in the week immediately preceding spring recess (Easter vacation) at Cornell. This year's event was held April 6 to 9, the week following spring recess.

In times past, Farm and Home Week has been held in February, but the college officials are agreed that this year's experience showed that travel conditions are more favorable in the spring for farmers and homemakers of the state. More than 9,000 attended the four-day sessions and the 1949 meeting scheduled two weeks earlier Deans Myers and Vincent expect that even larger numbers can be present. There is less likelihood of unseasonably warm weather to start springtime farm operations.

Farm and Home Week was resumed this spring after a lapse of 5 years due to war conditions. It is one of the largest meetings for farm people in the Northeast. Next year's event will be the 38th in the series.

Extensive crop damage by deer in the Southern Tier is given as the reason for asking the Conservation Department for measures to reduce the deer herd.

Resolutions by both agricultural agencies and sportsmen will be presented to Commissioner Duryea.
