Home Bureau Members Plan County Camp

Final plans for Allegany county camp for Home Bureau members are being completed, Miss Helen Willerton, Home Demonstration agent, announces.

The camp will be held at the transient camp, opposite Stony Brook Park near Dansville. This camp, which has been used by the 4-H for several years, has recently been renovated and put in fine condition.

Camp begins on Sunday evening, July 25, after supper, and closes on Wednesday evening, July 28, with a square dance led by Lawrence Dedrick, 4-H agent.

A full program is planned. Activities include swimming, hiking, and leathercraft, which will be taught by Miss Antoinette Evangelista, Assitant Home Demonstration agent.

As in former years, women attending will bring their food and prepare their meals. Menus have been planned to keep work at a minimum, and give as much time to fun and relaxation as possible.

Members planning to attend camp should notify the Home Bureau office at Belmont as soon as possible so that leathercraft supplies may be ordered. The last date for registration is Friday, July 23.

The camp committee in charge of plans is Mrs. Harold Chaffee, Angelica Unit; Mrs. Hattie Fuller, South Cuba Unit; Mrs. Lena Francisco, Corbin Hill Unit; Mrs. Paul Regan, Stannards. Unit; Mrs. Elizabeth Greene, Andover Unit and Mrs. John McCarthy, Birdsall Unit.

Little Boy Blue

Would blow his horn,
Go weaving through traffic too fast;
'Twas a great mistake
To blow and not brake,
And Fate upset him at last!

Speeding is the prime cause of accidents—it kills 10,000 persons a year. And remember—50 miles an hour may be safe on good roads, on open highways—while 20 can be dangerous in bad weather or heavy traffic. Speeding is driving too fast for conditions.

Drive as though your life depended upon it—it does!

Behind the Movie Sets

with Buddy Mason

Want to hire a hero? It's easy! In Hollywood there is a little group of professional daredevils who take over when the going gets too rough for the actors. These are the hired heroes of movieland, who for an hour or a day perform daring rescues and hazardous feats in the clothes of filmland's demigods.

Among the thousands of behind the scenes workers and technicians who build glamor to scale from blueprints are about 25 stuntmen who do nothing else but turn over cars, dive off cliffs, rescue gals from burning buildings and perform feats of daring that sound like excerpts from the dreams of a rarebit fiend.

These lads are not to be confused with stand-ins or photographic doubles. The stand-in is a man who approximates the size and build of the star for whom he works. His duties consist mainly of standing in the position the star will take during the actual shooting of the scene, while the electricians go through the tedious routine of setting their lights. The intense light is not recommended as an aid to perfect vision and almost always you can tell a stand-in by his watery eyes.

The photographic double is frequently mistaken for the stuntman by visitors to the studio, much to the chagrin of the real thrill artists. This double, who in most cases resembles the star, is used to spare the actor the discomfort of being doused with water, hit with pies and other unpleasant chores which require a close shot for the cameras. His resemblance to the star makes a quick shot at close range possible.

The stunt man nearly always works so far away from the cameras that only a similarity in height and general build is necessary. The makeup men take care of the rest.

The stunt man is a specialist. Being a trained athlete is one of his minor qualifications. Many of them are skilled acrobats, a helpful art when one is knocked off a cliff into a rope net out of camera range or is thrown out of a speeding car by a playful villian. A split-second sense of timing is his stock in trade, and perfect coordination helps him postpone that inevitable day when he opens his eyes in a cot with snowy white sheets and tries to focus them on a silently moving parade of starched uniforms.

Being a specialist, he is never overjoyed when someone mistakes him for a standin or photographic double.

A few stand-ins double for their stars. Jack Parker, who handles the standin job for Randy Scott, does most of his stunt work, but this is one of the exceptions that proves the rule.

Some stars would rather try to do their own stunts but they are dissuaded from such action by their studios. To the studios their featured players are business assets representing hundreds of thousands of dollars in publicity buildup and box office value. It would hardly be good business judgment to permit a man in whom such a huge investment was tied up to risk even a sprained ankle.

Any minor injury occurring to a star during the filming of a picture might hold up shooting for days or even weeks. With the hourly cost of production sometimes as high or higher than five thousand dollars, studios play safe and hire a stunt-man when the script indicates that the leading man might become subject to undue wear and tear.

A casting director thinks nothing of calling a stunt-man on the phone and saying, "Billy, are you working tomorrow? Okay, then be at the studio at eight in the morning ready to leave for location. You'll do a few skids and beat a train to the crossing. You'll come back into the studio in the afternoon to skid the car into a plate glass store front. Got it, Bill? Okay, eight o'clock."

These are the workaday calls of the stunt-man, the man you see so often on the screen without being conscious of his presence. The stunt-men are the studios' secondary insurance policies on their stars. I once asked Billy Jones, one of the better known hired heroes, what he'd do if the studio ever decided to offer him a starring role.

He replied quickly, "I'd scream my head off for a good stuntman."
