The Voluntary Route

Zealous to heal souls as well as their physical temples, the youthful doctor took a class in Sunday school.

"Willie," he asked, "What must you do to get to heaven?"

"We must die," promptly William made answer.

"Very true; but before you die?"

"We must be sick," was the startling rejoinder, "and send for you."

Special Deer Season for Bows and Arrows Is Announced

Albany, Sept. 13—In an unprecedented state-wide move, the Conservation Department will this year open the happy hunting grounds of New York State to bow and arrow enthusiasts.

Because of repeated requests from bow and arrow advocates for an open season on deer preceding the regular season, Conservation Department authorities sponsored a bill in the New York State Legislature which now allows bowmen to hunt two weeks before the opening of the regular deer season, and in any county or portion thereof where deer hunting is legal with firearms.

A special archery license is necessary because of this privilege, and costs $5.25. Weight ofthe bow or pull poundage must be at least 45 pounds, and the archer is subject to all other regular provisions of the law.

Check Your License

Take a look at your driver's license. Motor Vehicle Commissioner Clifford J. Fletcher reminds motorists that many operators' licenses expire September 30th.

In the past, operators' licenses have been issued for either one or three-year periods. Effective this year, licenses are issued for a three-year period only.

Licenses are renewable at issuing offices in every county of the State. Avoid last minute congestion by applying now.

Mary McAndrew says:

Andover, N. Y.—I was conversing with an ex-G.I. this morning. He'd just returned from a long stay in a military hospital. Jack was wounded in Germany and for two awful days he lay helpless, unable to beckon any of the passers-by to his side. And as he lay there, thinking he would die alone, thousands of miles from his home, he relived his past. The moments of great sorrow came back to him, but now they seemed like silly worries. He remembered the times when he was "too busy" thinking of himself to hear others call in despair. There was the boy who lived on the wrong side of the tracks who always vainly tried to be one of the "gang". During the sumer vacations the boys would gather at the ball diamond to demonstrate their ability to play baseball. The little boy would stand there in his dirty rags shifting nervously from one foot to the other and scanning the faces of the players, hoping they would ask him to play. It was all too vivid now, lying there in the mud, unable to move.

Just three days before he was wounded, he met the same boy again. He wandered toward Jack in a crowded musty cafe. But noticing him approach, he quickly went out into the street. He couldn't allow himself to talk to this boy whom he'd always classed as a dead-end nobody. He couldn't bear the humiliation, but he didn't think of the wounded pride of the other boy. Now he knew it was all wrong. There was nothing to distinguish them, except the social barriers he had raised between them. They were both fighting for the same thing, they could both breathe, eat and sleep, and some day, he knew they'd both die. His foolish pride vanished and for the first time he knew they were really brothers. Neither could boast of outstanding achievements and regardless of what one accomplished in life, it didn't make him any better than his neighbors.

Something happened to him then; when he awoke again, the pain was gone. He couldn't see, but he knew he was lying on a cot in a warm room. He couldn't move but he could feel his body encased in something hard. When he called, a voice near him answered, reassuring him. He recognized the voice as the voice of the boy whom he'd tried to avoid.

Jack is a nice fellow. He is matured beyond his years, but otherwise he isn't battle scarred. He wasn't humiliated by his confession. To tell someone would relieve that tense feeling, and he thought I'd understand. I know that people aren't bad. Everyone makes mistakes and no one should be ashamed of his faults. Black and white, young and old, rich and poor, Protestant and Catholic, we're all a part of this stupid, human mass.

Cast aside your hatreds; it only causes incongruity for others. Forgive the members of the public for the little white lies they told, and the mean things they say about you. It can't hurt you unless you give it the power!

Here's a cordial "hello" to our many Grange friends and neighbors all over the state, as well as to your local editors and publishers who are making possible this weekly chat by way of the Grange Newsletter. It is gratifying to State Grange, sponors of this new column, to realize the ready support members of the press are giving by providing space in their newspapers. We will be brief, newsy and informative.

Booster night is a "must" on every Grange calendar, and the date this year is Thursday, September 30th. Of special interest to us, is the initial broadcast, over New York State's own Rural Radio Network, of one of a series of Grange half-hour programs. This particular one, quite appropriately, will originate from Fredonia Grange No 1, over in Chautauqua county, which holds the first Subordinate Grange charter in the country. The time is 8:30 p. m. September 30th. National Grange Master Albert S. Goss will be on the air, as well as our own State Master Henry D. Sherwood, both featured on a program to be conducted from and by Fredonia. It has been suggested that local Granges set up an FM radio in their halls, as part of their regularly planned program that evening.

Older youth project, a community service originating with local Granges, is gaining momentum, and Harry L. Graham, new Director of Expansion, is living out of a suitcase these days trying to get around to see as many committees as possible. Five counties have been chosen to start the ball rolling: Chenango, Franklin, Orleans, Sullivan and Washington. Dates and places will be named in a later column. The State Committee, headed by Elton Borden, of Schaghticoke, includes Franklyn Sheldon of Lisbon, Mrs. Roy Bridenbecker of Chittenango, Mrs. Arthur Mooney of Worcester and Mrs. Grace Kohn of North Collins.

News of important events in your local Grange may be of interest to a great many of your rural neighbors all over the state. Send your items to us anytime, at 2364 James Street, Syracuse, and we'll do our best to include them here or forward to your local publisher.

Incidentally, we would like to hear from you anyway on how you like your new column. Send us a post card; we'll be glad to have your comments and suggestions.

Competitive spirit is in the air whenever two or more folks get together. That's how contests are born. Not to be outdone, National Grange has one on the fire that will probobly beat winning a blue ribbon for that mince pie or jar of watermelon pickles at the county fair. You might squeeze into the upper brackets for a new Grange hall.

The Community Service Contest is open to all Subordinate Granges everywhere, and so far some 250 from N. Y. State are entered. That's merely a trickle when we consider that most of our Granges can point to some worthwhile service to its community. A pond for fire protection a series of shelters at school bus stops, sponsoring a doctor in an isolated region, building a town war memorial, these and other "designs for happiness" are among the entries already sent in. What's yours?

You don't have to guess on obscure song title, and you don't need any box tops. Get your entry in to State Master Henry Sherwood at Pine Plains before September 27th.
