STATE SPECIAL SESSIONS, This will be one last quick reminder about the Sixth Degrees to be conferred this month in four cities on succeeding days to take care of all those candidates who are planning on the Seventh Degree at the Nationals in November. Plan to be there on the date or at the place best suited to you: Oct, 19, at Poughkeepsie; Oct 20, in Albany; Oct. 21, Glens Falls and Oct. 22 in Oneonta. Your Subordinate Master has all the details.

WE COVER quite a chunk of the state as we get about in our jalopy. Seems to us we've never seen New York looking quite so beautiful, all decked out in her bright autumn paint. We were fortunate enough to be cutting cross country in some of that splendid weather last week. The farms are improving in their looks, seems like, especially the homes, and goodness, the silo makers are cleaning up this year. It's harder to organize farm communities into these clean-up paint-up campaigns, but most of them are doing it anyway. Chalk one up to the Granges in most cases.

* * * *

IN CONNECTION with our work we've been trying to get folks who are particularly proud of their Grange Hall to write us about them, particularly if there is something especially attractive or unusual about them. So we were glad to have a nice letter from Avis Downey, Secretary of Gaines Grange No. 1147, over in Orleans county. What we think was of interest to all of us over the state is their Grange's special community project. It is a community play and picnic ground. I quote from her letter: "A three-acre lot at the rear of the hall has been purchased, and money is being raised to clear, level and equip it. Voluntary help will be used as much as possible, and our aim is to have a place for the children of the community to play, and a public picnic ground for all. There will be ball diamonds and places available for croquet, badminton, etc." We'll have to get our old croquet mallet and hustle over.

That's 30 and 73 for this week folks.

Hired Workers Express Liking for Privileges

"What do you think are the most important points for a farmer to keep in mind in getting and keeping good hired help?"

This question was asked of both farmers and regular hired workers on 58 farms in one New York county. Here are some of the results, cited by Prof. T. N. Hurd of Cornell's Agricultural Experiment Station:

A "maximum of privileges" was mentioned 33 times by the 65 hired men, and one-third of them placed it first. Next in importance was "pay good wages," followed by "treat workers like human beings."

Other points the hired men brought out, in order of importance or times mentioned were: Reasonable and regular hours, mechanization, time off, careful supervision, "don't drive or be overbearing," work with men, show interest in workers, good management, vacations, good conditions, and prompt payment.

In general, the farmers also gave high priority to the same things which were recommended by the hired men for getting and keeping good help. Highest ranking was given to a maximum of privileges "treating the men like human beings", paying good wages and keeping reasonable and regular hours.

Both farmers and workers placed privileges first and reasonable and regular hours fourth. Workers placed good wages second while farmers placed it third. On the other hand workers placed "treating like human beings" third, while farmers placed it second. "Time off" was ranked sixth by the workers and eighth by the farmers, and vacations were listed twelfth and eleventh respectively by the workers and the farmers.

MARY McANDREW Says:

Andover, N. Y.—A shocking amount of money is spent each year, by both men and women, on cosmetics, evening clothes and such dilly-dallies which are supposed to make one young.

The other day I saw a man who must have been past 80 who walked with brisk steps like those of a young Army captain. He was very trimly dressed and he made a lasting impression on the group attending the lecture.

Someone in the group asked him how he stayed young and with a beaming face and twinkling eyes he said: "I always practice moderation in eating, working and sleeping. I don't worry about anything. I never smoke and never in my life have I tasted liquor. I don't indulge in comfort and luxuries and I live up to my religion. If you'd like to stay young, never think of yourself, but always live for others."

That's so simple and easy to follow. It is as true as true can be, and never did anyone grow old who was unselfish, who worked hard for the thing he believed in and who lived each day as though it were his last.

Wouldn't some of that money spent on such luxuries and comforts many could survive without be of more value to everyone if it were spent on educations for the underprivileged? Just a small amount each year would greatly lessen the racial and religious intolerance problems. Many of the slums in the cities and the country shacks, which breed crime and diseases, could be eliminated. The field of cancer research could be greatly expanded.

Many of the fears and suicides that result from self-centeredness would be vanished if more people would adopt his formula. Being nice to others and trying to live a well-rounded life will pay dividends far superior to those, if any, resulting from the use of cosmetics or too many luxuries or comforts. Remember! No number of beauty preparations can hide the age of an individual. Even though one acts younger than his years, he is only fooling himself by attempts to conceal his age.

Stop and think of all the hunger and sordidness some in this world must endure. They endure it without complaining and very few of them ever become mentally ill. Why? Because they haven't the time to think of themselves. They haven't time to be self-centered. Every hour of every day, they are concerned with their dying neighbors and the hopelessly ill members of their family. They never cease working for only small amounts of money with which to buy a smaller amount of food. They hope that this food will give that dying member of the family added strength so that he may live.

To those of you who are young and wish to stay that way and to those of you who are old and wish to be young: "Never think of yourself, but always live for others."

A school teacher asked: "How many kinds of flowers are there?"

"Three, teacher," one boy replied.

"Indeed? And what are they, please?"

"Wild, tame and collie."
