Gerrit Smith to Horace Greeley.

Hon. Horace Greeley:
My dear Sir: It is surely not for me to question the propriety of your being upon an electioneering tour. For, whenever the way for Governor or President, I not only abstain from my vote, but voted for myself. I confess that I had no sense of modesty to restrain me from either.

I see that the reconignment of the North to Sou is the burden of all or nearly all the speeches with which you and green your ex-extended tour. It is rightly so. It is in no time now, to be talking of tariff and free-trade, nor of any of the common political and economic questions. I would have every other subject than that of the reconignment of the North to the South excluded from the public mind in this election. But, while I agree with you that this, and this only, is the thing for the hour, I nevertheless dissent entirely from your mode of treating it. You call on the Republican party to be reconciled to the South. But, from the day when General Grant allowed General Lee to surrender on terms so generous as to admit the rebel army to tears, the Republican party has been reconciled to the South. Never was a conqueror so lenient as our nation to the conquered. It denies to no one, North or South, the right of suffrage; and to less than two hundred of the prematurely guilty among the rebel chieftains. Moreover, even this, including Davis, Stephens and Toombs, would have been relieved of this disability, if at any time, their proud spirit had suffered them to ask for relief.
