WANDERING with "WILLIE"

HAPPY NEW YEAR! A little late this year, but we've always managed to at least start a new year. This year we were detained a speck because we went up the East Valley road to get our Christmas tree and just got back. Something up that way seemed to hold us down and after a few days we discovered we had muditis. Boy, that was the longest slice of mud pie we ever stepped in. But unlike some folks, we won't put all the blame on some other folks, but partially on the weatherman as he handed out the wrong kind of weather for that newly-filled road. Wet summer weather and lack of frost sure brought out that goo.

But going back to Happy New Year, we hope that for all of you it will be happy—in fact happier than old 1949 when we observed more home improvements, house painting, building, and lawn and garden improvements than we've ever seen in Andover since we arrived in this vicinity. We hate to admit that several of our streets look almost the same simply because one or two of the residents of these streets forget to look at their own premises while driving by those of their neighbors and thereby give the entire street a lousy appearance, but our hope for '50 is that they will do a little looking back when they leave their yard, or get up from the table and do a bit of picking up instead of laying down.

Happy New Year to those who have started planning for all of 1950 and have already started carrying out those plans in all the little ways that distinguishes the worker from the drone.

Happy New Year to the guys that have the will power to leave the bar when they have had a decent amount of laughing water, instead of sticking there until all hours and forgetting the family and the family's needs. (Don't get the idea that we won't have a beer with the best of them, bud; we will, in fact some doggone hypocrite with a lot of audacity gave us a case of beer for Christmas and since getting back down the East Valley road it took us two or three days to consume all that audacity).

Going right back to where we started—Happy New Year!

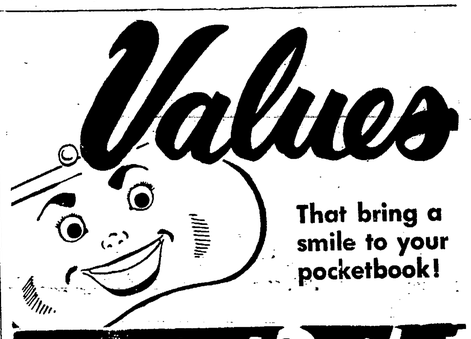
County $900 Short Of Seal Quota

Those who have forgotten or postponed acknowledgment of their 1949 Christmas seal letters were urged to do so in an appeal this week by Mrs. Wayne Stout, county seal sale chairman.

"It's true that we are accustomed to using seals on packages and letters during the Christmas season, but the money received for them is used for tuberculosis control the year round, no matter what the season," she said. "It is definitely not too late to pay for the seals because the work of tuberculosis prevention and control which they will finance will continue through the 12 months of 1950.

"Some people may have unintentionally mislaid their seal sale letters or may have overlooked making their returns in the rush of holiday preparations. We are happy to report that payments for seals are coming in daily, even though Christmas is over, and we wish to make it clear that although the campaign closed officially on December 25th, returns are still needed and welcomed."

Mrs. Stout added that many Christmas seal letters sent out with the opening of the seal sale on November 21 are still unanswered. Total receipts to date are still $900 short of Allegany county's quota. The goal of $10,000 is the minimum needed to make possible the 1950 program of the Allegany Health and Tuberculosis Association. If each one who received Christmas seals in the mail would respond, she said, the association would be enabled to put into effect its full program of activities planned for the new year.



That bring a smile to your pocketbook!
