MEADE, BY GEORGE H. BAKER.

When the Honorable Horace Greeley first learned of the precarious condition of his wife's health, he was preparing to start on his memorable speech-making tour through the New England States.

THE DEATH OF MRS. GREELEY. At length, on the morning of Oct. 30th, Mrs. Greeley died.

MR. GREELEY'S LAST DAYS. An unprecedented strain upon his mental and physical system.

THE NOVEMBER ELECTION. It was not until the evening of the 11th that he received the news with perfect indifference.

THE LAST WORD. It was during this period that he wrote his last article for the Tribune.

SICKNESS OF MRS. GREELEY. Meanwhile Mrs. Greeley's health had been falling rapidly.

ment a large falling off in the subscription lists of the Tribune.

Mr. Greeley never again visited the Tribune editorial rooms.

He was too much deprived of sleep while watching beside his wife.

He had suddenly forgotten what he was talking about.

He was talking about "I am ruined!"

Nov. 16, Mr. Greeley said to Mr. Johnson, as the latter was leaving his house.

At the appointed hour Mr. Johnson was there, but Mr. Greeley declined saying anything except, "Meet me at Sam Sinclair's at 8 o'clock to-night."

Mr. Johnson went there at the time and found Mr. Greeley asleep. Mr. Sinclair and Mr. George Ripley were in another room.

Mr. Ripley also begged Mr. Johnson to do so, but although it was then early in the evening, it was midnight before they reached fifty-seventh street.

Some days before that Dr. Edward Bayard, the late Mrs. Greeley's medical attendant, noticed that Mr. Greeley had a restless and feverish appearance.

PHYSICIANS DECLARE HIS CASE SILENT.

The following morning Mr. Greeley was more restless and haggard in appearance than ever.

Dr. E. Krackowizer, chief surgeon of the German Hospital, Dr. Krackowizer recognized the case as a serious one and at once resorted to the most energetic treatment.
