

The Farm and Dairy.

From the Western New York. The following from Mr. Harris, in the American Agriculturist, is a pretty good one for our readers. We are not making money simply because we are not farming as we used to do. I would not say this to outsiders, but among ourselves the fact should be frankly admitted. The remedy sought for. Some things are too low, but taking all our crops together prices are high enough for the consumers to pay. Wheat brings a fair price; barley is very high; potatoes nearly up to the average; apples are scarce and in demand at prices which check consumers. Corn is in excess, a good farmer rarely sells his corn; hay is extravagantly cheap, and so is straw. Pork is too low; beef and mutton are cheap, though dear enough for the quality. Really good beef and mutton command a fair price.
