Turning Back the Pages of Andover History

(Taken from the Files of the Andover News)

50 YEARS AGO

MAR. 7, 1900

Mosher & Backus, Publishers

There are only five prisoners at the county jail, of whom there are three from Andover for borrowing their neighbor's chickens.

Rev. Stephen Burdick of the Andover S. D. Baptist church was guest speaker at the meeting of the ministerial club at Wellsville, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Bloss and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Wilkinson were Wellsville visitors Monday.

Mrs. Cora Baker is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. LeRoy Burdick at Alfred.

D. K. Porter, J. S. Phillips, C. L. Earley and G. M. Barney were in Friendship on business Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Conley, Mr. and Mrs. Purdy Mead and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Pease attended the funeral of Mrs. Maud Williamson in Hornellsville, Sunday.

Mrs. Lorena Beebe Howden 25, wife of Harry Howden, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Beebe of Elm Valley, Friday, February 25.

D. K. Porter is spending this week in Rochester.

Gerald Stein left Andover last Thursday to work in a silk mill at Hornell.

Mrs. W. A. Reed of Canisteo passed the week-end with her father, Calvin Slocum.

L. T. VanWie started Wednesday for Lebam, Wash., where he will work as a stationary engineer.

Mark Ludden of Genesee, Pa., spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Guy Harder. Mr. Ludden was en route to Tallahassee, Fla., where he will join the Elmira State League baseball team for spring training.

Mrs. Margaret E. Corbett, 72, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Burdick, February 25. Besides Mrs. Burdick, another daughter, Mrs. Phoebe Vandusen of Hornell survives.

Henry Wisner Cook, 63, lifelong resident of Andover, died at his home east of the village, Monday, March 1. His wife and a brother survive.

Raymond Hardy has purchased the Nathan Williams farm at Elm Valley and is moving his family there from Almond.

M. T. Garvin, Ligouri Lynch and Charles Bines attended the auto show in Buffalo this week.

R. K. Hammond was in Corning Monday to visit his sister, Mrs. L. T. VanWie, who is recovering from an operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bennett of Canisteo were called to Andover the first of the week by the illness of their daughter, Mrs. Floyd Scott.

Wealth may not be happiness, but it seems to bring a pleasant kind of misery.

Better Health For Children

A Community Service Issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

Children are subject to all sorts of minor cuts and scratches that require proper home first aid treatment to prevent infection and complications.

The best treatment for small cuts and scratches is a typical home remedy—soap and pure water. However, the soap and water should be applied with a piece of sterile cotton, and the soap rinsed away with plently of clean water before any antiseptic is applied. If you do not have a pure water supply, keep a bottle of hydrogen peroxide handy, and use it in place of water.

After a minor wound has been thoroughly cleansed, apply an antiseptic. Metaphen is considered one of the best antiseptics because it kills germs, does not sting severely, and doesn't burn raw tissue.

Iodine is one of the most common antiseptics, and is safe to use if it is a 3½ percent solution that has been well stoppered. If the alcohol in it has evaporated, discard the bottle for a new one, because a strong solution of iodine burns the skin seriously. Iodine also frightens small children because it stings severely. Don't put iodine on wet skin, and don't use it with any other antiseptic. If it is used, don't bandage the cut or schatch tightly—always keep it so air can reach it to evaporate the iodine. Mercurochrome is also widely used, but when in solution with water, many doctors feel it is too weak a grem-killer to be effective.

Cuts on the face should be treated by a doctor to prevent scars. Cuts on the hands and wrists should receive medical attention, because they may damage nerves or tendons. Any large cut that gapes open should be treated by a doctor. Any wound that may have been contaminated by street dirt or manured soil should also be seen by a doctor, because such dirt often carries tetanus (lockjaw) germs. Tetanus serum will probably be advised. If the child has had tetanus shots, he will need only a booster shot instead of tetanus serum. Be sure to tell your doctor if your child has been immunized against tetanus.

It is always well to let any cut or deep scratch bleed for a few minutes in order to wash out some of the germs that may have entered the break in the skin.

Small prepared sterile bandages are excellent for most types of small cuts and scratches. Larger cuts should be dressed with squares of sterile gauze which can be held in place with narow strips of adhesive tape. Pressure created by using a number of squares of sterile gauze—enough to form a thick pad—will help stop bleeding in small injuries. Larger cuts that bleed profusely should be treated by a doctor as quickly as possible.

Uncle Sam Says

My hat is off to the volunteer U. S. Savings Bonds County Chairmen and others who are still giving patriotic service to their country. Year in and year out these volunteers are carrying the message of financial independence through U. S. Savings Bonds to every county in the nation. For 1950 their slogan is: "Save For Your Independence." They'll show you how millions of Americans are securing THEIR future by purchasing. U. S. Savings Bonds.

What Mother Said

Nellie was entertaining Mr. Noble and little Tommy was hanging about. At length Nellie told him it was time for him to retire.

"Oh, can't I stay up a little bit longer?" pleaded Tommy.

"What do you want to sit up for?" asked Nellie.

"Why, I want to see you and Mr. Noble play cards," answered Tommy.

"But we are not going to play cards," said Nellie.

"Why," said Tommy, "mother said you were. I heard her tell you that everything depended on the way you played your cards tonight."

A girl met an old flame who had turned her down, and decided to high-hat him.

"Sorry," she murmured when the hostess introduced him to her. "I didn't get your name."

"I know you didn't," replied the ex-boy friend, "but you certainly tried hard enough."

HOMEMAKERS Dispatch

Low Heat Is Best For Meat

"Keep heat low when you're cooking meat"—that's a motto every wise homemaker will want to memorize.

A low temperature means fewer dripping losses so you have more meat left to serve the family, say food specialists at Cornell's College of Home Economics. When you roast meat, set the regulator at 300 to 325 degrees F. for beef, veal and lamb; set it at 350 degrees F. for fresh pork. Always roast pork until it is well done.

Other advantages of this low-heat method are that meat is cooked more evenly and is more tender and juicy than when high heat is used. Also you won't have to spend so much time watching the meat during cooking because there's no danger that it will scorch or burn.

Homework For Good Looks

A beauty treatment you can give yourself every day at home is to make each housework task a correct posture exercise

Good posture wil make you look and feel better. You can improve posture by "standing tall" as you go about your work. Check kitchen counters and tables to be sure they are the right height; you should be able to stand at ease as you work instead of bending over the counter.

When you want to pick something up, squat down to do it; then heavy pelvic muscles help with the load rather than leaving all the work to arms and shoulders. Always squat down instead of bending over because the latter stretches shoulder muscles.

Winter Bouquets

To give your house a spring-like look while it's still winter, cut a few branches from flowering shrubs or fruit trees and force them to bloom. Here's how to do it.

Choose branches that have large flower buds. And of course it's a good idea to cut them from a tree that needs pruning. Forsythia and pussy willows are good choices because you can get them to bloom quite easily in about 10 days to 2 weeks. Apple, pear, and Japanese Quince blossoms will take longer.

Put the branches into a jar of water so the cut ends are well covered with water. Keep in a warm room until they bloom—in 10 days to 3 weeks. For any of the branches except forsythia, the jar may be kept in a sunny window for quicker blooming. To speed up blooming, you can soak the whole branches in warm water for about 15 minutes when they're first brought in.

Mandarin Oranges

The mandarin-type orange (tangerine and satsuma) belongs to the citrus fruit family and is a good source of vitamin C. The mandarin orange, because of its deep orange coloring, has valuable amounts of vitamin A, too, and iron content. Because mandarins may be peeled easily they are usually eaten right out of the hand. This method of eating makes available the full measure of vitamins and minerals contained in the fruit, without the loss which occurs when citrus fruits are squeezed for juice.

A leading automotive engineer has forecast that Americans will not be driving atomic energy-powered automobiles at anytime within the foreseeable future. Use of the atom in a private car would require about 25 tons of steel and concrete just to protect the passengers from radiation.

Eggs will keep better when stored with the large end up, for then the air space stays in the large end where it belongs.

PENS, INK AND PAPER

By Mary McAndrew

The 1950 New Orleans Mardi Gras, which began on Twelfth Night, immediately after Christmas and ended on Fat Tuesday, the day before Ash Wednesday, drew a horde of celebrants and spectators to its tradition steeped celebration.

Lavish parades preceded the spectacular shows. This year, decorated tractors replaced the mules, that for the past 200 years have drawn the lavishly decorated floats through the streets Groups of screaming spectators crowded closely to the floats, mules and flambeax and reached eagerly for the "throws", inexpensive items, varying from tin soldiers and whistles to bracelots and necklaces.

Heretofore, each year, the carnival organization rented the mules from the street saniation department, but improvements have eliminated these beasts.

A carnival ball, organized by New Orleans residents, is held exclusively each year for out-of-towners.

Unlike many of the celebrations, wherein, a visitor is seldom included unless a resident friend secures an invitation for him, the ball presented by the Krewe of Bacchus is open to everyone. Either street clothes or formal wear is appropiate at this event. While evening dress is required at all other balls, even for those sitting in the balconies.

On the same night, visitors also witness the parade of the god of the sea, Proteus, on his way to his own pageant at another location.

Zulu, king of the colored carnival parade, carries the traditional hambone scepter. In years past this parade came in by barge on the New Basin canal and King Zulu tossed cocoanuts to the spectators.

For the past 200 years, men have dominated the carnival but for the first time, the queen and her maids appeared on the floats and tossed kisses and "throws" to spectators along the way.

"This way, sir. What kind do you wish, sir?"

"Doesn't matter, just so they don't button in the back."
