Poetry.

DISAPPOINTED.

I thought, to-night, to see thy face,
And morn'g not for thy own sake down;
But morn'g has been in his place,
Hanging on my chested heart to frown.

SELECT MISCELLANEOUS.

A TALE OF JEWISH FOLK-LORE.

The period of our next, and last tale, is supposed to be some time antecedent to the 19th century, for the original is to be found in the Mishnah.

THE PEOPLES OF ISRAEL.

A rich collection of Jewish folk-lore has been assembled to make frequent journeys to Athens on business.

He is in my life to him because what I have not known for many generations.

Take, then, this key to the treasury and preserve it for him, his name is Agathelos, and he is a Jew.

Friends and Friendship.

There is no finer test of what a man really is than the way in which he makes and keeps his friends. In the first early bloom of life friends are easily won and often as easily lost.

The youth at school, or the maiden in her teens, wears the rose of friendship as a lady dressed for a ball wears a rose upon her bosom.

Most willingly, friend, would I emulate my good father, and show these friends of mine that I have not been a mere playmate.

WIT AND HUMOR.

How to become practically acquainted with the "rules of three"—Live with your wife, mother and mother-in-law.

—A Michigan schoolmaster points out the sad fact that no schoolmaster has ever been president.

—Some young men in Gross Bay, presented a preacher with a horse and received his heartfelt thanks: Two days after the presentation the horse was taken away by the farmer from whom it was stolen.

—Ohio men don't ask each other how to go on and have something to drink, but maintain personal friendship by passing around handfuls of manfully developed peanuts and gum drops.

—Not far from this city," writes a Cleveland correspondent, "lives a gentleman who is the father of seven grown-up daughters. They are rather lively girls. The father is an admirer of Hawthorne, and he calls his house the 'House of the Seven Gables'."

—A few days ago a very handsome lady entered a dry goods house and inquired for a "bean." The polite clerk threw himself back and remarked that he was at her service. "Yes," but I want a bean, not a green one," was the reply. The young man went on mentioning goods immediately.

—They have a mud-hole in Bensington (Vt.) so deep that small children are frequently lost in it, and the Gazette says: "We don't care anything about it, 'cause our folks are just out of children; but for the sake of our suffering neighbors, we call attention to the matter."

—They have a new way of sending-upgarments patterned at Akron, O. After the young folks have had their house and settled down to the fun of the thing, the lady they have surprised introduces a solemn visaged parson, who entertains the company for two hours with one of the bluest kind of sermons.

—A returned gambler at Akron, O. After the young folks have had their house and settled down to the fun of the thing, the lady they have surprised introduces a solemn visaged parson, who entertains the company for two hours with one of the bluest kind of sermons.
