LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE

Albany, March 23, 1874.

There seems to be a great deal of dissatisfaction among the people of the little village of Alfred, and a number of the "wobblers" are going to leave the quiet town, I suppose in answer to the prayers that have been offered by some of the "Alfred Centre Republicans" for the removal of the "Liberals" as they term them.

I understand that John D. Russell is to be removed from the office of "god-out" case as disposed of, or that it is in this unsatisfactory manner, and the manner in which it has become known to her death will go down to history as an unexplained mystery. Spiritism will doubtless claim her death to be a misfortune in some degree, but the skeptical "outside" will never believe anything else but that there is some great mystery in it which some one might explain if they saw fit. Requested, etc.
