HEALTH FOR ALL

This column is sponsored, in the interest of better health, by the Allegany Health & Tuberculosis Association, 44 Schuyler St., Belmont, N. Y.

School is Out

Children all over the country have put away their school books to enjoy the summer vacation.

To the children, the time has arrived for fun and relaxation, of freedom from school routine, discipline, homework and examinations. They take readily and eagerly to this change to all-day play and outdoor life.

We adults see school days as necessary to the mental and educational growth of the child. Similarly, we can look on his vacation days as essential to his healthy physical growth. Lagging appetites perk up and some children begin to sleep better because increased fresh air and exercise bring on a healthy fatigue at the end of the day.

Although school days mean a certain amount of confinement and deprivation of outdoor exercise, they do tend to foster regular habits of eating, sleeping, and cleanliness among children. For example, most parents get their children to bed on time because they have to get up early for school. Children generally eat a better breakfast during the school year and many schools provide pupils with a nourishing, well-balanced lunch. There is less opportunity, too, during school days for children to nibble at snacks and spoil their appetites for good food at the main meals.

As a general rule, children are "scrubbed for school," with special attention to clean fingernails and teeth and pupils are reminded almost daily in class of the importance of health and hygiene.

Just enough of the attention given to the child's health during school weeks should carry over into the summer vacation to assure that he returns to school happy and healthy in September. This certainly does not mean that a child should be nagged about health rules after an "earned" vacation following nine months of study and school routine. Nor does it mean that a few "late nights" or extra snacks during the day will do harm.

But it does mean that parents should realize the understandable tendency to allow things to "slide" during the summer and help make the child's summer vacation the relaxing, refreshing and healthful experience it is meant to be.

County Bar Votes Increase in Charges

Following a thorough study by a committee appointed to analyze comparative legal fees, the Allegany Bar Association at a meeting in Wellsville last week, substantially increased its rates, effective as of June 15, 1950.

The revision provides for the first general increase in the suggested minimum legal fee schedule since 1926. An attempt was made in this revision to bring the Allegany County Bar rates to conform with rates already being charged by attorneys in adjoining counties, the Bar Associations of which counties, some time ago have taken similar action to raise legal fees.

Asking a woman her age is like buying a used car. You know the speedometer has been set back—but how far?

Library News

The Children's Summer Reading Club started off with enthusiasm last week.

In 1937 there were three boys and three girls who joined the summer reading club. This year 48 children have signed up.

When the child has read his first book he is given his funny little man to enter the obstacle race. Each book read takes the little man over the brook, fence, wall or some other obstacle until after reading the tenth book, he climbs over the hill and the course is finished.

Parents can help keep up the interest by encouraging the child to tell at home about the different books read, and also help to see that books are returned and exchanged on time.

The library is open Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoons.

Reserve Corps to Meet at Scio

Administration of the Organized Reserve Corps personnel living in Allegany county has just changed from the Unit Instructor at Rochester to the Unit Instructor at Jamestown according to an announcement by Capt. Chester M. Gates, Regular Army Instructor in charge of the Jamestown office.

The first result of this change of jurisdiction will be a meeting of all present members of the ORC to be held at the Boanga Club at Scio on June 28, at 8 p. m. The Captain emphasized that anyone who is interested in information concerning the ORC, whether or not they are present members, would be welcome at this meeting.

The meeting will be primarily of a discussion of the plans for the organization of ORC units in Allegany County. Tentative arrangements are already under way for the activation of an Engineer Unit in Bolivar. It is also planned that additional units will be activated in Wellsville if sufficient interest is developed.
