

Our Boys and Girls.

Be slow to accuse. "Mother, I can't find my savings bank key," said Arthur, coming into his mother's room with quite an anxious face. "Put it right here in my overcoat pocket. It had been hanging up in the hall all day, and I do believe that new girl has taken it out. She saw me leave it last night and put it away."

"Look in your pocket, Arthur. A little boy who is apt to forget things must not be too positive; that he put his money in his pocket-book. And never accuse anybody of stealing without a shadow of evidence. This is very silly as well as unkind. What if Susan should lose her money and accuse you of stealing it? Remember the golden rule."

"But, mother, she looked very guilty when I said I had lost it, and that I know that some one had taken it out of my pocket!"

"Very likely she had taken it out of her pocket," said his mother. "Do not accuse a person unless you have seen him do it. A gentleman once said that the most guilty person he ever saw was a man arrested for stealing a horse, which afterward proved to be a mistake. 'But what has become of my money, mother?' It is gone—that is certain. 'I believe you lost a fine top hat, that it was supposed a little neighbor had stolen,' said his mother with a smile.

"But I can't leave it in the grass-ville arbor this weather."

"That there plenty of other things, please don't say. Did you have on that jacket last evening?"

"No, mother; I believe I had on my gray one, but then I know I put it in my pocket-book."

"Don't say you know, my dear, for it may be an untruth. Please bring me your jacket."

Arthur walked slowly up to his room, very foolish when he came into his mother's room again.

Mother comprehended it all at a glance, and smiled as she said, "If your mother looks guilty this time?"

"Oh, mother, I am sorry, but I did not know it was gone. I remember now, just in plain as can be, carrying up the jacket three days ago, and putting them into my jacket pocket."

"It is a very serious thing, Arthur, to make such charges as you did, to accuse against an innocent person. You will never take the trouble to correct it. I will pray for you, my dear boy, that you may learn to correct this sin with me. You will never correct it, but I will pray for you, my dear boy, and tell Susan you have found your money, and try to make amends for your injustice by being more than usually thoughtful and obliging."

The Spinning Jenny.

James Hargrave was marking on the floor of his cottage with a burnt stick. Then he sat with his head on the wall and his hands on his knees, and he cried and wept and he cried and wept. He had been thinking of the fire and he was thinking of the money that he had lost. He had been thinking of the money that he had lost. He had been thinking of the money that he had lost. He had been thinking of the money that he had lost.
