WANDERING with "WILLIE"

THIS week we received the following letter from our fellow townsman "Art" Genung, expressing his views on "The Man With a Shovel" and "Paddy of the Patch." The letter follows:

Dear "Willie":

You seem to be in the same boat as I am, Willie, because no one writes to you. In my case, I get about as much attention as a Civil War statue.

Do you remember just a while back when we were in the public eye every week? We both thought that it would always be that way, but what a let down it was when our fair-weather friend "The Man With a Shovel" decided he had no further use for us.

I asked several people what their opinion was on this and all had different answers. Some were inclined to think that he has gone high-hat since he had his hair cut by a barber, while some said that his wife got tired of writing articles for him. Personally, I can't figure it out.

By the way, Willie, did you know that poor old "Paddy of the Patch" is heading for the last roundup without even a horse? I went down to give him a piece of my mind about neglecting us too, and found him too weak to argue.

The neighbors told me that he had a mental lapse one day and invited "The Man With a Shovel" down to dinner. From all reports he ate everything but the shovel. This left "Paddy" without food or funds, and when he appealed to "Our Friend" for a meal he received no reply. Now he is a victim of malnutrition and sinking fast. So, Willie, you can see what sort of an operator our one-time pal is.

Drop me a line and let me know what you think about this subject.

A Friend,
ART GENUNG

Glad to hear we have one guy left who will write to us "Art" but the radishes were getting up beyond our reach and the weeds beyond that so we sort of relaxed a bit and just weeded. We will agree, however, that your opinion and discovery of the appetite of "The Man With a Shovel" is no baloney as he happened to drop in at our shack a while ago and we were having sandwiches and coffee for lunch so he agreeably agreed to join us while he was on the job. As there was only half a dozen sandwiches on the platter he didn't hang around very long as he said he had a lot of collections to make and after he left we discovered that we hadn't ate any sandwiches as we got kind of interested in his gab and forgot to eat, but that was all right as there were three eggs left in the old ice box and we carried on from there. And "Art" he dropped in at the new restaurant the other evening and ordered a little snack and when the gal toted it over to him it didn't last no time and when she came back to see what made him keep staring at the plate he just pointed to where the potatoes had been so she gave him another order of the spuds and still he kept looking at the plate so she repeated the process as she felt kind of sheepish to take his dough without giving him the satisfaction of feeling filled up—but after the third helping of potatoes and rolls and beans she had to leave him, so probably you'll find his body lying around the village some place as he probably starved to death.

We haven't seen "Paddy" but once since the minstrel show so as you said he is probably among the missing by now after coming into contact with the shovel boy.

Poultry flocks in New York State produce more than two billion eggs annually amounting to a 90-million dollar business, latest figures show.

Library News

Good Books for Summer Reading

If you enjoyed "Southern Cross" by Brigid Knight, we suggest another good book written by her. "Westward the Sun" is the story of Charlotte Durant, who came back to her home in South Africa after a visit in England. It tells of her life and love during the dramatic chapter in Africa's history when the English and Boers were struggling for supremacy in the Transvaal.

"Gentian Hill" by Elizabeth Goudge, author of "Green Dolphin Street," is a story of love, adventure and faith in a harbor town of England in the 19th century.

Would you like to re-read "The Rosary," the moving love story by Florence Barclay? We have a new copy of this well loved book at your library.

"Look Out for Liza" by Faith Baldwin, a light yarn about a beautiful young and wealthy New York widow, who is not as helpless as she appears to be.

Sara Ware Bassett's books are always entertaining, with her stories of people living along the New England coast. In "White Sail" she writes of an ex-Air Corps pilot and a lovely young girl, both trying to forget the past, and the mystery surrounding them.

"Broken Rainbow Ranch," by Brad Ward. The ranch is in deep trouble and Gil Martin, the owner's son, returns from five years abroad to straighten matters out. Sounds like a Gene Autry or Roy Rogers plot.

Everything for the vegetable grower from new varieties to weed and disease control and soil conservation will be featured at the Vegetable Field Day on a 25 acre plot overlooking the Cornell University campus on August 12. The field day which is also the annual summer meeting of the New York State Vegetable Growers' Association, starts at 9 a. m.

Allegany County To Have One Day on Doe

Albany, July 3—The taking of deer of either sex will be limited this year to one day, November 30—the last day of the regular deer season—in 25 counties of western and central New York and the Southern Tier in a special open season just established by Conservation Department order it was announced here today.

The counties and parts of counties with the special deer season are: Allegany, Broome, Cattaraugus, Cayuga, Chautauqua, Chemung, Chenago, Cortland, Erie (part), Genesee, Livingston, Madison, Monroe (part), Onondaga, Ontario, Orleans, Schuyler, Seneca, Steuben, Tioga, Tompkins, Wayne, Wyoming and Yates.

A special "buck or doe license" costing the same as the regular "big game license" will be required and will take the place of the latter license for hunting of deer in these counties. It will permit the licensee to hunt deer with horns not less than three inches in length during the first five days of the open season, and if still unsuccessful, to hunt deer of either sex on the last day. A hunter who has taken a deer with a big game license elsewhere in the state previously this year is not entitled to hunt with the buck or doe license, Department officials pointed out.

The order was adopted by the Conservation Department, according to Commissioner Perry B. Duryea, following the recommendation of the Joint Wildlife Control Committee, representing the State Conservation Council, state-wide sportsman's organization, and the agricultural interests of the area, and the recommendation of the Department's District Game Managers, after giving consideration to the need for not only reducing agricultural crop damage but also damage to the natural range occupied by the deer herd.

Also supporting these recommendations, Commissioner Duryea added, were the Department's biologists who presented new findings from field investigations which show a decline in the reproductive capacity of the deer herd when it reaches high levels in comparison with the carrying capacity of the range.

Although some sportsmen's groups in one or two counties did not favor a deer of either sex season this year, it was decided to adopt it for the entire area provided for in the special law enacted by the State Legislature, and to fix it at the minimum length possible—one day. This was done to spread hunting pressure over a wide area and thus limit concentrations of hunters as far as possible.
