Little Cordelia's grandmother had an old-fashioned way of measuring a yard by holding one end of the goods to her nose and then stretching the piece at arm's length. LEGISLATIVE matters handled at the New York State Grange annual sessions recently have been thoroughly covered in the press of the state, but in at least one instance a resolution was misinterpreted by members not able to be present. This was the one involving a "policy of leniency towards farm boys" by local draft boards. It was quite true that the delegate body rejected this thought, when the committee on public welfare reported the resolution to the floor with the recommendation that it be disapproved. This feeling was sustained by the delegates.

There is in preparation, by State Secretary Harold M. Stanley, a little folder, usually furnished to all Granges this year, entitled "The Grange Speaks in Annual Session." This is a synopsis of the more important resolutions pertaining to State and National issues which have approved or opposed by State Grange delegates. We suggest that Grange members use these to inform themselves on Grange policy.

GRANGE youth program will receive new impetus in the coming year with authorization of the appointment of a full-time youth director. The success of the growing program in this phase of Grange work has shown a need for more complete supervision. We can expect to see an increased interest and participation by our coming Grange leaders as soon as plans are worked out.

NATIONAL Grange 84th annual sessions begin in Minneapolis this week. The late National Master Albert S. Goss' eight-point, bipartisan plan will undoubtedly receive the endorsement of the delegation, who consist of the masters and their wives, of the 37 Grange states in the nation. Another issue of national importance will be the election of a National master to succeed Henry D. Sherwood, who by reason of an installation following Goss' death, is presently National master. There is strong reason to believe that Mr. Sherwood will have strong consideration.

As in other years, we will keep you informed of events as they develop.

Points of View

Kindly old man (admiring 12 little children): "Well, well, can these all be your children, or is it a picnic?"

Woman: "They're all mine. It's no picnic."

"I observe that your honor shakes your head at my statement. I reaffirm it, although you dissent," said the young attorney.

"Your remark is uncalled for," said the judge.

"But, your honor, you shook your head," said the young attorney.

"That may be true," replied the judge. "There was a fly on my ear, and I reserved the right to remove it in any manner I saw fit. Proceed with your argument."
