IRA BLIXT, County Agent

Farmers in Allegany County will save time by filing their final 1950 federal income tax returns on or before January 31, H. I. Blixt, county agricultural agent states.

Mr. Blixt reported that even though farmers have a choice of either filing a final return on January 31 or an estimated return on January 15 most Allegany farmers will file their final return and pay their tax on Jan. 31. In either case payment of the tax must be made at the time of filing. By filing a final return and paying your tax on January 31, you will save time and avoid the necessity of filling out another return and paying any balance due by March 15, 1951.

No changes have been made in the rules and regulations affecting the way Allegany county farmers report the sale of dairy , breeding, or work stock on their 1950 federal income-tax returns, says Dr. V. B. Hart of the department of agricultural economics at Cornell. "Based on present rules and regulations, if the sale of dairy, breeding, or work stock is to be considered as the sale of a capital asset, the following requirements must be met: The animals must have been held for more than six months and must have been in use for dairy, breeding, or work purposes at the time of sale; the sale must have: (a) reduced the normal size of the herd; or (b) made room for replacements to change the quality or breed of the herd.

Allegany county farmers may get additional information on filing 1950 federal income tax returns from Cornell bulletin 709. Free copies are available from the county agricultural agent's office in Belmont.

Federal income tax forms have been mailed to each Allegany county farmer by the Internal Revenue Department at Buffalo. Additional copies may be obtained from the Extension Service office in Belmont. Farmers should make an extra copy of each return for future reference.

Marriage Is No Longer "Out" For Draft Induction

Draft boards are in receipt of a bulletin from Selective Service headquarters on the subject of married registrants.

The bulletin reads, in part:

"Registrants who have married after being ordered for physical examination or after having been ordered to report for induction have certainly acquired such status at a time when they reasonably might have expected to face call to active duty. In the case of a man who is married after an order to report for physical examination, the local board might justifiably have some hesitancy in reopening his case, but there is nothing to preclude that action on the part of the local board if the board believes the case should be reopened. The registrant who marries after he has been ordered to report for induction certainly has little grounds upon which to expect to be relieved of a service obligation. In these cases the local board, in the opinion of headquarters, has neither the power to reopen the case nor the power to postpone the induction."

Better Health For Children

A Community Service Issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

During holiday seasons children and adults are apt to eat too much and too often. The Children's Hospital of Buffalo cautions parents to keep an eye on this holiday hazard. Most families enjoy "turkey and fixing's", cakes, nuts, candies and rich cookies at this time of year. Having them so infrequently, they taste especially good and little children often find that supposedly happy holidays result in unhappy stomachs.

There is a general but incorrect idea that all stomach-aches are caused by indigestion or appendicitis. Either of these conditions may cause stomach-ache but there are many other possible causes. Most children can occasionally eat unusual foods without upsetting their stomach and usually they can eat an unusually large amount of their regular diet without trouble. At the holliday season, however, they not only eat too much, but too much of unaccustomed foods and they eat constantly—candies, nuts, cookies, etc. This situation, coupled with holiday excitement can easily bring on stomach upset. Wise parents will try to control their child's diet and, if he does have a stomach-ache, they will not give a laxative unless it is ordered by their doctor. A stomach-ache may be a symptom of conditions which will be seriously aggravated by a carthartic. Put the child to bed and take his temperature. He should not have anything to eat, however, if he's thirsty you may safely give him small sips of water.

Worry, excitement or fear cause the muscles of the stomach to tighten so that food can't be properly digested. Sometimes when a child is in the early stages of a cold, grippe or sore throat they will have a stomach upset. Another cause is food poisoning which results most frequently from bacteria in foods such as custards, whipped cream or poultry stuffing which has been kept too long or has not been stored in the refrigerator. Some children vomit when their stomach is upset, others have diarrhea or become constipated. But regardless of symptoms or what you think caused the stomach upset, do not give a laxative until your doctor advises it.

Thoughtful Gifts

You may be one of those far-sighted persons who has her Christmas gifts bought and ready for their bright wrappings. But if you're like many of us, you still have plenty of shopping to do. So a hint about selection: When you buy gifts for a busy homemaker or her children, think not only about what will delight mother and the youngsters, but also what will save her time.

If, for instance, you buy clothes for a child, consider the ease of washing and ironing the garment. Frilly frocks may be pretty on a little girl, but often simpler styles will please her as well and save mother a lot of effort on wash day. Toys that can keep a child happily occupied on mother's busiest days are also a good choice. For mother, gifts that will save time and steps are likely to be welcome. Any real thoughtfulness in gift selection can extend Christmas cheer far beyond the holiday season.

Holiday Appetizer

The cranberry—bright and red—symbol of holiday feasting makes an excellent juice appetizer. You will have to strain the concoction, but otherwise the procedure is simple. Cook together equal parts of apples, cranberries and water. Strain and add sugar and lemon juice to taste. If the juice is too concentrated, add more water.
