Local Guidance Director Named to Ag-Tech Committee

Marvin Mandell, guidance director of Andover Central School has been elected to serve on a guidance advisory committee to the New York State Agricultural and Technical Institute at Alfred, according to Director Paul B. Orvis.

Members of this committee were chosen by the guidance sections of the Western, Central Western and Southern Zones of the State Teachers Association. The guidance committee will play a vital part in determining such school policies as admissions, curriculum revision, cooperative work programs, and testing programs to prevent overlapping or duplication of tests by the high schools and this institution.

Commenting upon the committee, Milo Van Hall, director of student personnel at the institute, said: "The inception of this committee marks the beginning of an awareness on the part of high school counselors that they must better understand the needs and programs of institutions of higher learning if they are to best serve youth, as well as an awareness on the part of higher institutions of higher learning that they must better understand the problems of the high schools."

It is planned that this committee will meet with administrative and faculty personnel from the state school at least twice a year.

Agricultural News
IRA BLIXT, County Agent

Allegany county farmers will have to pay approximately five per cent more in Federal income taxes this year, according to H. Ira Blixt, county agricultural agent.

Mr. Blixt reminds all farmers that these taxes are due January 31, unless they plan to return an estimated tax, which is due January 15, with a complete return the 15th of March. The county agent expresses the opinion that the first alternative is the best. He also pointed out some important considerations. Poultry flocks this year can be treated as the sale of capital asset and thus only 50 per cent taxable providing:

1. They were held more than six months.
2. When sold, they made room for replacements or reduced the size of the flock.

Mr. Blixt explained that all livestock can now be treated as sale of capital assets, but that they must meet the two requirements outlined above. Farmers should use the Schedule D, a special form for this, he said.

Another question of recent inquiry, according to the agent, has been how to treat the losses due to the recent windstorm. According to a recent interpretation, Mr. Blixt said that any farm building, roof, toolshed or other item used in the farm business, that had been damaged or destroyed, could be treated as a farm expense. However, any insurance recovered, or depreciation allowed or allowable in past years, must first be deducted from the stated loss or expense. He explained further that the damage to a farm dwelling could NOT be considered as a farm expense on the 1040F but would have to be deducted on the personal tax 1040 form.

Mr. Blixt stated that there is a good supply of income tax bulletins and income tax forms available at the Farm Bureau Office, Court House, Belmont.

County Poultry Vies For Honors In Boston Show

Entries of Ernest Thomas of Cuba Lake Goose Farm, will be among outstanding birds from all over the U. S. and Canada which will compete for $50,000 in prizes at the 103rd Boston Poultry Show at Mechanics Building, Jan. 17-21.

The show, the oldest and largest poultry exposition in the country, this year expects more than 6,000 entries. They will compete for blue ribbons, cash prizes, and a chance to strut in the gilded cages of the A&P Food Stores 'Hall of Fame', focal point of the show," said Paul Ives, manger of the event.

Contests will be held in all classes of poultry, including meat chickens, baby chicks, fancy ornamental breeds and game birds.
