PASS AND WIN

By Eunice Hall

Passing helps win a game. Basketball is a game for five players so there is no room for one who wants to play the game alone and receive the glory in the end. When you see five boys working in unison, moving the ball around smartly for openings you are seeing the finest sights in sports.

Moving the ball around is not the simplest thing in the world. In order to avoid costly fumbles, running with the ball, interceptions and other errors which lose possession of the ball for your team, you must have five players who are coached in the art of passing. You would be surprised at the times a double dribble or a fumbled ball is not the fault of the player, but a direct result of a poorly timed or inaccurate pass.

An important thing about passing, which many boys overlook is that it is the prelude to the score. In the course of the quick action, the opponents will make many errors, being taken out of position, looking away from their men momentarily, getting called out of play. A team of good passers can utilize these lapses to make spontaneous plays.

In order to cope with all the possible situations you get into during the active play of a game, you must learn how to make passes from any position and in many styles.

TOT SPOT

by Mary Brown

The students in Miss Evans' kindergarten have completed ten lessons in their Reading Readiness books. They are also working on the proper way to color puzzles and do finger painting.

During the last four weeks Emily Alvord, Charlotte Mead, Connie Meyn, Pearl Perry, Janis Reil, Frank Coy and Edwin Hoose of Mrs. Robison's kindergarten have had perfect attendance.

Jeanne Campbell has returned to school after being ill with the chicken pox.

Connie Meyn treated her kindergarten classmates to fudge at the morning circle time.

Now we shall journey downstairs to Mrs. Connor's first grade where all the children are talking about the birthday party they had in the room Monday. James Appier treated his classmates to ice cream and candy served by his sister, Dorothy and four of her seventh grade friends.

Robert Clarke, one of Mrs. Hall's first graders, has a new brother, Samuel.

Gary Burdick has returned to school after two weeks absence due to chicken pox.

Regina Baker of the third grade returned to school last week after an extended illness.

Miss Church's fifth and sixth grades won the spelling contest with Miss Baker's fourth grade.

The fifth grade is preparing booklets about Washington which will contain a story of his life and pictures.

The sixth grade social studies class is getting ready to make scrapbooks on France and life in the middle ages.

Mary Teresa McAndrew's team of the sixth grade has a 100 per cent donation record for the March of Dimes campaign.

I have just received a last minute bulletin from Mrs. Tompkins' second grade delivered by Ellen Joyce. It seems that all the pupils want to tell Rosamond Baker how much they miss her. Rosamond fell and hurt her back and cannot come to school.

IN MY OPINION

By Anita Nichols

What do you think of using 18-year-olds in the Armed Services.

Marion Milligan — "I don't think they ought to be drafted until there is an absolute need for it, because we need the young fellows home to make a stronger nation."

Thelma Mickle—"I think it is a good idea, since it would save money by not drafting married men with families."

Laura Mae Croyle—"I think it is all right as long as our government does not go below that age."

Kent Harder—"I think they should, we have to go some time anyhow, we might just as well go and get it over with."

Gay Rogers—"I think they should, it's a good idea."

Charity Howland—"Yes, it's a good idea. Most of them are just out of school and haven't planned their life work yet."

Janet Hall—"I don't think they should."

William Glover—"I think it's a good idea."

Pat Sackett—"I think it's a shame. Sniff."

Phyllis Burger—"I think it's all right, because they would have to go later."

Eunice Hall—"It is hard for the fellows to break away from their training in school, and begin on their own ahead of time."

Bill Gorsuch—"I think the same as Bill Glover. It's a good idea but I don't have to worry after the first of February anyway."

Colleen McAndrew — "No, I don't think they should because we need the young fellows on the home front too."

Agnes Davis—"It's okay if they are out of school, but don't take them out of school."

Neva Curry — "I don't think they should."

Jack Wheaton—"Not much you can do. Really don't know."

Betty Sutherland—"It's okay to take 18 year olds if the government doesn't take veterans who have seen it all before."

Dolores Brown—"Not unless it is necessary."

Lois Ruger — "For personal reasons I don't approve."

Clyde Jackson—"There is no use fighting it. They will take us."

Jo Ann Marsh—"I don't think they are mature enough."

Joyce Spicer—"I suppose if it is necessary, but I hate to see them go."

Mary Lou Clark—"I don't think it's good, especially when they are still in school."

John Dougherty — "I don't care."

Clarice Nye—"I think it's a good thing since they'll have to go later."

Billie Ryan—"They can't vote so why should they have to fight?"

Miss Winkleman—"I think it is better than taking fathers."

Marcella Smith—"I don't approve of it, but I guess it's okay."

No allowance a man gives his wife compares with the one she makes.

"HARVEY"

Harvey, as always, was looking for some Friday night excitement and ended up going to the Senior Frolic in the gym. He saw that the seniors had been decorating with balloons, snowflakes and streamers.

After he arrived, about 9, he headed for a soft chair near the music of the Kanisteo Valley Boys. He saw Mimsi Briggs and Jerry Green, Suzanne Hyland and Lyle Slocum, Louise Lounsberry and Dick Nye, Mary O'Dell and Kenny Perry and Mary Button and Wayne Atwell, the old steadies.

Harvey wants to let Clyde Jackson and company know that the practical joke which had been played on them was very cute. It seems that someone thought that it was Clyde's wedding anniversary and had a song played. Clyde is offering a reward for any information leading to the jokers. Harvey thinks that maybe Clyde did it himself.

Harvey noticed that over the week-end Marion Northrup had been visiting Sandy Bostwick. The two confided in Harvey that they had a marvelous time skating last Friday night.

Dale Pelton and Ann Marie Joyce learned to round dance together at Mary Brown's party. Ronnie Howland is very good at juggling and from all reports is willing to give lessons.

Sunday night Harvey was told that Abe Davis and Gay Rogers went to the show.

A new romance has started—Millie Miles is going with Rodney Wheeler.

In the library the new drapes are being put up. They were made by the homemaking classes. The drapes are cream colored with red flowers and they really brighten up the library.

Early Monday morning ACS welcomed a new student, James Smith from Wellsville. Jim is a member of the junior class.

Friday night, February 2, the local quintet will battle for a win with Scio on their court. Harvey hopes the victories wlil be for Andover.

Tuesday afternoon the Girls' Athletic Association went to Greenwood to play. Harvey, of course, went along in my pocket.

Until next week Harvey tells all to "keep smiling" and everything will turn out all right.

Awards Made at Dairy Show

The John N. Thompson Forestry Trophy was awarded E. E. Foster of Alfred, and the Hugh Chamberlain Conservation award went to James T. Kane of the Vandermark. Both awards were made at the Allegany County Dairy Show held last week in Friendship.

The Thompson award designed to promote and foster better understanding of principles and ideals of good forestry was won by Mr. Foster for his excellence and co-operation with the agricultural agencies toward the development and knowledge of good forestry practices. He also has worked out a development plan for conservation operations for the Allegany County Soil Conservation District covering good land use and forestry based on land use capabilities so that every acre of the 350 acres under his control in the vicinty of Alfred is used for the best possible forestry practices.

Some of the forest measures considered in this award were the use of shrub borders, reforestation of land, woodland management, woodland harvest cutting, protection of woodland including ponds to supply water for fire protection and the construction of fire breaks. Cooperation under the Forest Practice Act of the New York State Conservation Department and with the Bureau of Game as well as co-operation with the other agricultural agencies including the Farm Bureau, the Production and Marketing Administration were also important.

The judges of this contest were Irving S. Bowlby, District Forester, of the New York State Conservation Department at Bath New York; Fred E. Winch, Extension Forester, of the New York State College of Agriculture; and Floyd Carlson, Extension Forester of the New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse, New York with Robert A. Reed, District Conservationist, of the Soil Conservation Service as advisory member.

The trophy will remain in Mr. Foster's possession for one year or until a new winner is chosen. For permanent possession the trophy must be won three years by one individual.

The Hugh D. Chamberlain Conservation Award presented to Mr. Kane was based on the ideals of the promotion and establishment of good soil and water conservation program for the farm.

To win this award, Mr. Kane was judged on his participation in District activities including the use of his farm plan and the percentage of installation of the complete soil and water conservation plan. On this basis, Mr. Kane rated about 80 per cent, which is very high. He also was rated on the work which he has done with his neighbors and explaining conservation work and attending soil and water conservation meetings.

Some of the other points on which Mr. Kane was outstanding was his co-operation with Sportsmen's Clubs and other conservation groups, including the Bureau of Game and Division of Lands and Forests. Co-operation with other agricultural agencies such as the Farm Bureau, and the PMA also helped Mr. Kane in his total score.

Some of the conservation measures established on the Kane farm include diversion terraces, strip cropping, pasture improvement and management including a great deal of use of birdsfoot treefoil for improving pastures, the removal of obstructions and the leveling of pasture areas to provide for easier mowing and maintenance. The protection of woodlands and the reforestation of steep, idle areas not suited to complex agriculture.

Judges of the Chamberlain Award were Hugh M. Wilson, Extension Soil Conservationist for the State of New York; Leon Andrews, Chairman of the Steuben County Soil Conservation District Board and Roy Babcock of West Valley, New York, Secretary-Treasurer of the Cattaraugus County Soil Conservation District Board with Robert A. Reed, District Conservationist, of the Soil Conservation Service as advisory member.

Farmers interested in soil and water conservation are urged to visit the Kane farm to observe what Mr. Kane has been able to do in the establishment of soil and water conservation measures to improve the farm and working conditions.

1 cup boiling water.
Juice of two lemons.

MEET OUR TEACHERS

By Gay Rogers

Mrs. Marco Conde, our school librarian, was born in Montour Falls, N. Y. She has four children, Jim, David, Bob and Jacqueline and lives on Elm street in Andover.

Dressed in rose, Mrs. Conde might go to the movies in a Plymouth car to see Laurence Oliver and Greer Garson or "Gone With the Wind." If she spends a quiet evening at home after a tantalizing dinner of steak, Mrs. Conde would probably read a book by Shakespeare or David Copperfield. Her pet peeve is to have boys shuffling in the house during her pastime of sewing.

Mrs. Conde attended Keuka College and Geneseo Library school where she obtained a B. A. degree. She has been teaching for fourteen years.
