A Letter to "The Shovel Boy" From "Willie"

We are printing a letter that "Willie" had prepared for publication and came to our desk this week:

Dear Shovel Boy:

Sorry that we didn't get around to answer your letter, but a breath of Spring hit us betwixt the eyes and we were stunned, as we thought it was a robin, but after getting up we discovered it was a potato, just a little teeny weeny bit of a potato that someone threw not knowing where it would land, or what it was going to grow into, but still a spud. And with spring fever and such, and politics and such, sorry to say, there are a lot of little potatoes flying about that no one can definitely put their finger on—all a fellow has to do is stick his eye out and he gets a double whammy of little potatoes. But what we were going to say is that you are better off up thar in the mountins' where you don't have to take sides, and you don't have to see friendships that have taken years to build up drop like a dirty dish rag because of small town politics, where the pay of the whole group won't even equal half of what a good basketball player can get for fouling up one game—but you know Andover (or do you know anything?)

We have lost and are losing some mighty good folks in the burg since you took to the hills Wonder boy, and we are going to lose some more when the dial gets in as we really ARE progressing. But we are old and weak and just sort of sit around and listen to the radio (do you still have one?) You know how the Hello Gals used to sort of keep track of you when Bostwick wanted you to shovel his walk or some one was taken suddenly sick and wanted to get their insurance paid up to date, well after the dial gets in and we are modern like the other folks we won't have the operators to cover for us and when the old women get on the phone to just kind of find out what the world outside is like they will have to call from here to Mars to find out just what they wanted, but that is life. But, Shovel Marvel, you won't be here to know what that means, as you will be with Sara Nac, in the mountains and won't even have to worry about wearing your shoes unless it is a special.

According to the papers we are even going to lose our cop and personnel of our village board. You don't think so much of a shift in boards, Shovel Marvel, as they sometimes get tired of bickering and stuff or get to the age where they want a rest from carrying the responsibilities of a village the size of New York City. But when a cop gets tired and fed up with handling drunks and running errands and watching kids and stuff then you sort of wonder where the San Hill the potatoes are coming from that hit him too, as that is sort of out of the ordinary. But we will say and probably after he has had to pull you out of your favorite doorway where you continually get stuck for the past three years you will have to agree, that is going to take a fellow with a lot of patience and good humor and experience in our suburb of New York to fill his place. We know that we don't want the job.

Well, Marvel Man, now that the snow is down so low that you can shovel it with a dust pan, perhaps you will dare show your mug back in the village for a few days—we don't you dare? Art Genung was really insulted that you said he ran out West, that is west of West Greenwood to get away from the coming minstrel. He said that last year he wanted you to give free prizes to several members of the audience during the show but after the prizes were all laid out you took them home for safe-keeping and they haven't been found yet. Maybe you had better explain that to him as he is mad.

"Willie"

New Rulings On Lake Trout And Rainbow Trout

Albany, Mar. 27.—According to a bill just signed by Governor Dewey, the trout season in the seven Finger Lakes and their tributaries not only will be open for rainbows April 1 but for brook trout and brown trout as well. In addition, the use of gaff hooks for any purpose has been prohibited in those same Finger Lakes rainbow trout waters.

Normally, the season on browns and brooks in that area would not have opened until April 14 as it will in the rest of the State, Conservation Commissioner Perry B. Duryea explained. However, when angling for rainbows, many fishermen were unable to identify other kinds of trout taken with the result that many unwitting violations occurred. The new law now permits the taking of all species only in those waters where rainbow fishing begins April 1, Mr. Duryea reiterated.

The season on lake trout opens throughout the State on the same date.

Commenting on the outlawing of the gaff, Commissioner Duryea pointed out that it was no trick for unscrupulous anglers to snatch rainbows from the shallow streams with gaff hooks. As long as the gaff was legal to land fish hooked by angling, he added, game protectors were powerless to prevent snatching unless they actually witnessed the act. Ruling out the gaff for any purpose in the rainbow waters will save many fish, he concluded.

We wish to thank Rev. Father John Shea, our friends and neighbors for their many, many acts of kindness extended us during the illness and death of our parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Walsh.
