Get Tough With Deer Violators

Albany, Mar. 28—The penalty for hunting deer out of season by day has been upped to equal the fine for taking them at night by jacklight, according to a new conservation law just signed by Governor Dewey. Conservation Commissioner Duryea warned would-be poachers today.

The stiffened penalty, sought by sportsman following decreases in jacklighting activities as a result of heavy fines previously imposed by legislative action for night hunting, is not less than $100 nor more than $500 or a maximum one-year imprisonment or both. Commissioner Duryea also pointed out that the hunting or taking of deer out of season may subject the violator in addition to a civil action for penalties of $100 plus $400 for the first deer and $100 for each additional whitetail.

Under the old law the fine of $100 for illegally taking deer other than by jacking did not prove sufficiently severe to curb market hunters since sale of only a couple of carcasses was sufficient to pay the penalty.

"The most important step in avoiding machinery break down delays in spring work and provide safe operation is to put farm equipment in good condition before field work starts."

With spring planting season just around the corner, tractors with plows, cultivators, discs and planters will soon be at work in fields to meet the 1951 food goals. Defective hitches, seats, clutches, wheels, brakes, sterring mechanism and ungarded revolving parts are things to check. Many fatal accidents are caused each year by failures of make-shift seats and unguarded power take-off shafts. Clean all dirt, trash and grease from platforms, pedals, foot rests or steps to assure safe footing.

"Special care should be taken also checking homemade labor-saving equipment for accident hazards. The operator's safety is often over-looked in development of this type of equipment. Acidents can easily offset all the other advantages that might be derived from homemade equipment."

Timely servicing will reduce repairs, accidents, costly field breakdowns and make farm work more pleasant. Poorly conditioned farm machinery irritates and tires the operator, reduces his alertness, and encourages carelessness. Field accidents often result when the operator attempts to improve faulty operations which should have been corrected before the machine was taken to the field, Mr. Blixt urged farmers to start checking their machinery today.

Potato Growers In Tough Spot

New York growers had better plan carefully or stay out of the potato business in 1951, a Cornell agricultural economist reports.

Prof. M. C. Bond, extension economist, says these years of adjustment after seven years of supported prices and expanded production will be tough ones. The total losses may be less, he points out, if the adjustment is made quickly, in another year or two.

Costs per acre are likely to be higher this year than last, he says. The cost per bushel depends on yield of good quality No. 1 potatoes.

In 1951, both New Jersey and Maine potatoes will be without price supports and will compete for the New York markets, noted Dr. Bond. The New Jersey crop comes to market in August and September and Maine spuds from November through the winter.

If New York growers are to retain the markets they have built up in recent years, their potatoes will have to compare favorably with those of their competitors, the economist points out.

Survey of Needs Of Elderly People Being Taken

A survey of the needs of older people in Allegany County is being made by the Allegany County Public Welfare Committee. This study, one of the few ever made on the needs of older people in a rural community, is designed to find out from the older people themselves the kind of thing communities can do in order to make their lives more cheerful and pleasant.

The intensive part of the survey will be done in Almond Township where Alfred University rural sociology students will take questionairs to residents. In other communitites ministers, school principals, doctors, community leaders and organizations will be contacted. Information from census reports and other public records will be used. It is hoped that information gathered in the study will lead to suggested programs for county communitites based on what the older people would prefer.

Mrs. Knight Thornton, Wellsville is chairman of the committee conducting the county-wide survey. Other members are: Mrs. Edward Briggs, Wellsville and Mrs. George Kirkendale, Alfred. The Almond survey will be directed by Dr. R. L. Warren of Alfred University who is president of the county committee.

"What we want is to get a picture of the needs and problems of our older residents, and an evaluation of our community affairs from their point of view," stated Mrs. Thornton.
