FEDERAL EXCISE Tax increases of from 7 to 20 per cent on new automobiles as well as proposed redoubling of federal tax on gasoline are vigorously opposed by the Executive Committee of the New York State Grange. At a recent meeting the Grange officers went on record against the F. E. T. raise of new trucks and cars as well as raise in gas taxes, pointing out that any mandatory increase in the cost of non-highway use of gasoline would add to the already high cost of food production. Farmers, by reason of their location, are dependent on automotive transportation for The Grange affirms that farmers are willing to pay their fair share of all general taxes levied for the support of the - government and defense, but are opposed to any legislaion which would levy any disproportionate share of the tax burden upon one form of transportation, as being highly discriminatory and unfair.

Wallpaper Spots

Wallpaper, like everything else in the house, takes a certain amount of abuse when kiddies are around. Little moist fingers can leave greasy spots and a sudden spurt of artistic endeavor in an unwatched moment may show up in fancy crayon decorations on the walls.

When you've gently admonished junior, you may as well go to work on the spots. Scrape off as much of the crayon as possible. Then sponge lightly with a cloth dampened with carbon tetrachloride, acetone, or denatured alcohol. For grease spots, use a thick paste of fuller's earth mixed with carbon tetrachloride. Apply the paste, let it dry, and wipe it off with a cloth dampened with more of the carbon tetrachloride.

"Not yet," answered Willie. "He's finished two faucets and has just commenced on the other two."

Better Health For Children

A Community Service Issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

Psychiatrists at the Children's Hopsital agree that most very small children are naturally orderly. As they get older and have a wider variety of interests, they are so eager to go from one interest to another that they are apt to become disorderly simply because they don't want to spend time putting what they have been using away before starting a new activity. It seems true that some children are by nature neater than others, however, those less inclined to neatness may be helped to acquire the habit—that, after all, is what neatness is: a habit.

As soon as babies are old enough to toddle around after mother as she attends to household duties, they begin to copy what she does. Mothers are urged to encourage this interest by letting the child "use" the dustpan and brush, for example; even though there may be nothing to sweep up, they get the idea of being tidy and grown-up. Today there are toy replicas of almost all household utensils which entertain children while teaching them. When it comes to putting things where they belong, the mother who spends time to train her child will be repaid many times over for her patient persistance. Indeed when the child is grown he will be grateful to have been taught, because tidiness increases mental poise and so makes life easier.

Most mothers today don't have extra help and are kept so busy that they're tempted to pick up after their children themselves to save time. It does save time and it does avoid friction, but it will wreck their attempts to teach their children order, if, done habitually.

A certain amount of picking up most be done by parents but it should be kept at a minimum. Allowing a child to have a certain place just for his own things is very wise—no matter if such a space is but one bookcase shelf. It gives him a sense of individual importance and responsibility which is essential to his development. Furthermore it is an aid in teaching a child to be orderly.

He: Does the moon affect the tide?

She: No, only the untied.
