Better Health For Children

A Community Service Issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

Earaches are frequently seen in children up to four years of age. They are caused usually by a mild infection which often accompanies a cold; however, because there may be some other cause, doctors at the Chidren's Hospital advise parents always to have their physician examine the child as soon as possible.

Even though a baby is not old enough to tell you he has an earache, he will constantly rub the aching ear, be fretful and may run a temperature. Any of these indications should be a warning to parents to seek medical advice. The dangers of mastoiditis and abscesses are greatly reduced by the present-day use of hitherto unknown drugs provided the child is examined promptly by a doctor.

Until the doctor comes, the child should be kept in bed away from possible drafts, if he has a fever. It sometimes reduces the pain if the child rests his head on a covered hot water bottle. An electric pad may be used instead but should be covered with waterproof material to prevent moisture, either perspiration or drainage from the ear, from reaching the electric coils. Parents are cautioned never to use the old-fashioned remedy of warm sweet oil in the aching ear because it is likely to spread the infection.

A child under six years of age may safely be given half a full sized aspirin tablet or one child-size tablet to reduce pain before the doctor comes, however, the dose should not be repeated until prescribed by a doctor. Children are susceptible to aspirin and an overdose can cause poisoning. The aspirin bottle should be kept locked up for this reason—hundreds of children are hospitalized every year because of eating aspirin, especially the candy-coated varieties.

If the infected ear is draining, wash the drainage off the outside of the ear with soap and warm water, being careful not to get water in the ear. Do not put cotton or any other material or medicine inside the ear without the advice of a physician.

Challengers With "Pull" Sought

In this highly competitive life we lead we can get farther if we have a certain amount of "pull." Just how much "pull" you have and the technique used is what determines the eligibility of challengers for the title of "County Milking Champion" at the coming Allegany County Agricultural Field Day to be held in the latter part of July. Anyone who would challenge Mrs. Amos Jellison of Transit Bridge for the title should contact the Farm Bureau office in Belmont. Mrs. Jellison was last year's winner.

Mrs Jellison challenges all comers to compete publicly with her at the Field Day. Anyone with proper "pull" and influence upon a good cow's milk secreating mechanism so as to fill a goodly portion of a milk pail within a specified time should make his or her ability known. Mrs. Jellison is in good training at this time and is expected to be well practiced for the event. The use of mechanical milkers is barred.

No Waiting List For Navy

The Navy Recruiting Station for this area has announced that enlistments in the Navy can be effected immediately for men that fall within the proper mental category. Any men that are interested are urged to contact the Navy Recruiting Station in the Post Office Building in Olean as soon as possible.

The Navy physical standards have been lowered to conform to that of the other services so any man in normal health should meet the requirements.

During the later part of June and July a large influx of boys who are out of school is expected therefore, men who are out of school now are urged to apply as soon as possible.

The recruiting station is open from 8:00 a. m. until 4:30 p. m. on week days and until noon on Saturdays.

People who marry for real love have a wonderful habit of never doing it again.
