Better Health For Children

A Community Service Issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

Sunshine provides a source of vitamin D which is essential to health and although sunshine is a blessing—particularly in comparatively sunless areas such as Western New York—it can be dangerous.

Those at Children's Hospital advise sunbaths for babies and little children but caution against the intense midday sun and against too long an exposure. Babies have such delicate skin that their sunbaths should always be carefully timed to avoid sunburn. Some doctors advise keeping babies under six months of age out of the direct sun, therefore, consult your own doctor about the length of time which he recommends.

Usually the first sunbath lasts two minutes--one minute on the baby's back and one minute on his stomach. Gradually the exposure time is increased to thirty minutes a day. If your baby's eyes are still sensitive to bright light, it's inadvisable to put him in the sun and even if they are strong enough, always place the baby with the top of his head toward the sun. In this position his eyebrows afford shade from the sun's glare. Placing the baby in the direct sun while in his bassinet or carriage is not recommended because he is apt to get overheated. It's better to spread a beach towel or blanket for him to lie on so that air can circulate around his body. Near the water, sun is liable to burn and even on a foggy day, especially at the seashore, it can burn severely.

Older children can stand much more sun than babies, but they should be proteced by a hat or bonnet during the hottest part of the day. It is never a good idea to get sunburned. Cocoa butter or a good sun lotion will provide a protective coating to the skin but never use oil because it will intensify the burn. Sunburn not only injures the skin, it can also bring on chills, nausea and fever. If your child has any of these symptoms call your doctor at once.

William J. Hart, 22, of Wellsville was instantly killed Sunday night, July 1, when the car he was driving went out of control left the highway and rolled over near Shongo.

A witness to the accident stated that it appeared that the right door was partically open and he reached to close it and lost control of the car.

Mr. Hart, son of Henry and Finoli Wiles Hart had always lived in Wellsville and was a veteran of World War II.

THE GRANGE NEWSLETTER
by E. Payson Smith

GRANGE Secretaries who have not already mailed in their June 30th reports are urged to do so promply so that State Secretary Harold Stanley will be able to compute the net gain in memberships. In addition, secretaries have been requested by National Grange to send in membership reports so that results of the Goss Memorian Membership drive can be figured. All Granges which have fulfilled the requirement of a net gain of ten members this past year will be entitled to an award certificate. Be sure to claim yours if you have qualified, and get in your state reports at once.

TOP-Level government economists are warning White House and Stabilization officials against placing primary reliance on price and wage controls to avoid inflation. Of greater importance, they say, is adjustment of purchasing power to the supply of goods. Goods and money must be brought into proper balance. Direct price and wage controls are only a temporary expedient at best until more fundamental steps to halt inflation can be taken. Unless those steps are taken, price ceilings will feed rather than quench the flames of inflation. Economists recommend: (1) primary emphasis on production. They believe the total supply of consumer goods can be kept high while expanding military output; (2) Sound tax policy to put defense on a pay-as-we-go basis, coupled with strict government economy on non-defense expenditures; (3) Restraints on excessive consumer and business credit, plus sound management of the public debt; and (4) an effective savings campaign to increase personal savings by 100%.

VETERINARY doctors from all over the state will converge on Elmira July 10 through 13 to observe sixty years of veterinary progress in New York state. We mention this because of the contribution to a better agriculture which this profession has made by keeping step with developments in livestock and poultry disease control. The N.Y.S. Veterinary Medical Society was organized at Rochester in 1890. Today, in addition to the statewide society with central offices at Utica, there are ten affiliated associations in various sections of the state including many women's auxiliaries. At the annual meeting members will enjoy a full program including outstanding speakers from a round the country as well as the Veterinary College and College of Agriculture at Ithaca.

HEALTH FOR ALL

This column is sponsored, in the interest of better health, by the Allegany Health & Tuberculosis Association, 44 Schuyler St., Belmont, N. Y.

The "Unknown Case" of TB

The chronic communicable disease, tuberculosis, ranks first as the cause of death among infectious diseases and kills more young people between 15 and 35 than any other disease.

To cut down on the frightful toll in lives and suffering which tuberculosis takes, we must prevent the spread of the disease from person to person to check the spread of tuberculosis, everyone who has the disease in an active form must be found and placed under treatment.

It is estimated that there are half a million cases of tuberculosis in this country. Of this total, only half are known to the health authorities. This means that there remain a quarter of a million "unknown cases"—people not known to the health authorities, most of whom are not under treatment and many of whom do not even known they are ill.

A person can have tuberculosis without knowing it The onset of tuberculosis is usually slow and the disease may be in an advance stage when the symptoms become obvious. Therefore. the search for unknown cases must be made among apparently healthy people. And one of the major aids in finding unknown cases of tuberculosis is the chest X-ray

The chest X-ray, a "photograph" of a person's lungs, can show up suspicious shadows in the lungs of a sick person long before the victim feels ill or shows symptoms of the disease. The X-ray is widely used today in searching out unknown cases of tuberculosis among large groups of apparantly healthy people. The development of X-ray machine using minature film has made possible the screening even of whole communities in comparatively short periods of time.

When suspicious shadows show up on the small film, a larger film is taken for more detailed study. If the larger film then indicates signs of disease, further steps are made before final diagnosis. If a diagnosis of tuberculosis is made, steps can be taken to help that person get prompt treatment. The patient thus has a better chance of regaining his health than if his disease had gone on undiscovered until it reached an advanced stage. At the same time, the chance of his spreading TB are reduced when the disease is discovered early.

If every adult had a chest X-ray at least once a year, there would be no "unknown cases" of tuberculosis, and most cases of the disease would be discovered in an early stage. When that happens, we shall be a long way toward eradicating tuberculosis in this country.

VETERANS' News Letter

Veterans of World War II planning education of training under the G.I. Bill are reminded by Raymond F. Shear, Director of the Allegany County Veterans' Service Agency, that the July 25, 1951 cut-off date for starting courses is only a few weeks away.

This coming summer school term will be the final such term most veterans may enter or reenter before the deadline, Mr. Shear said, so if they plan to enroll they should start making arrangements at once.

The 1951 deadline applies to most World War II veterans--those discharged from service before July 25, 1947. Those discharged after that date have four years from their discharge date in which to begin.

Veterans actually must have commenced their training by the cut-off date if they want to continue afterwards. A veteran must be in training on that date unless he has temporarily interrupted his course for summer vacation or for other reasons beyond his control.

Once he completes or discontinues his course of G. I. Bill training after the deadline he may not start another course.

Further information or assistance may be had by calling at the Veterans' Service Agency, Belmont, New York, or by contacting Mr. Richard J. Dzimian, State Veteran Counselor, whose office is also in the Court House, Belmont, N. Y.
