July 31 Deadline For Filing Household and Farm Tax Returns

Roy Grove, manager of the Olean Social Security Office reminds housewives and farm operators that the Federal law requires the filing of social security tax reports on all workers covered by the new social security law. The first tax report was due the last day of April. The second quarterly return is for April, May and June and is due the last day of July.

Mr. Grove expressed the hope that all employers required by law to file tax returns on these two new groups of employees would do so before the deadline. Employees of the Collector of Internal Revenue and the employees of the Social Security Administration are eager to assist household and agricultural employers in getting off to the right start. Both agencies recognize that all household and agricultural employers are not fully aware of their obligations. Employers who are uncertain are urged to immediately contact the offices of the collector of internal revenue or the Social Security Administration.

Farm and household employees who need new social security account numbers or duplicates of their original number may obtain them from any social security office. Applications for account numbers can be secured from any post office or social security office.

Household Workers

If you are a housewife or operate a household, you are an employer under the Social Security Act if during January, February, and March of 1951 or any other calendar quarter you employ a worker on 24 different days and pay the worker cash wages of $50 or more. Household employees include maids, laundresses, housekeepers, nursemaids, cooks, gardeners, furnace men, handy men, valets, footman, grooms, chauffeurs, etc.

If your household worker meets the test of 24 days and $50 cash wages and you have not already gotten in touch with the collector of internal revenue, you should do so immediately, and request the social security pamphlet, "Do you have a Maid?" This pamphlet which contains the few simple regulations, can be secured either from the collector of internal revenue or the Social Security Administration.

Farm Workers

Regular farm workers are covered by the Social Security Act. Who are regular farm workers? Well, it works like this. If you are a farm or ranch operator who employed a farm hand, cook, handy man, etc., continuously during October, November, and December 1950, and who then works for you on 60 days during January, February, and March 1951, and received $50 or more in cash wages in the second 3-month period, he is a regular farm worker and you must report his wages and pay the social security tax on his January, February and March wages. If he meets this test either in the first or second quarter of 1951 social security reports are due. The first quarter report was due April 30 and the second on July 31.

If the farm hand did not work for you during the last three months of 1950, no report was due in April 1951. A report will be due for April, May and June, however, if the farm hand worked continuously during the first three months of 1951 and then worked during 60 days or more in April, May and June for wages of $50 or more. The report for these three months which would be the second quarter of the year would not be due until July 1951.

The rules really boil down to this: The first full calendar quarter of employment is a trial period to see if the farm hand will be a regular worker. The next 3-month period or quarter is the test or qualifying period, and if the worker performs services on 60 different days and you pay him cash wages of $50 or more he is under social security and you are required to file a report.

Husbands, wives, parents and children under 21 are not to be reported as employees.

If you are not already registered with the collector of internal revenue as a farm employer, you should immediately request the circular, "Notice to Farmers with Regular Hired Help," from the collector of internal revenue, any collector, your county agricultural agent, any Production and Marketing Administration official, or the local social security office.

The tax rate totals 3 per cent one half of which may be deducted from the employees wages and one half paid by the employer. The employer alone, however, is responsible for collecting the tax and filing the tax return.

Not everyone can do great things--the secret is to do small things in a great way.
