Erie Nears Goal To Complete Dieselization

New York, Aug. 28—The Erie Railroad will probably be the first fully-dieselized trunk line railroad in the East, Paul W. Johnston president predicted in announcing that Erie directors approved the purchase of 13 additional diesel-electric locomotives here today, at a cost estimated at $1,900,000.

"Based on the current volume of business, it would only take approximately $9,000,000 more to complete the program," Mr. Johnston said. "How fast we can go toward this goal will depend on our financial ability." The Erie has invested over $60,000,000 in diesels in the last seven years and will own 427 units when those now on order are received.

In July, the Erie handled 94 percent of its freight business with this modern type of motive power. A year ago, 60 percent of all gross ton-miles were handled with diesels, he explained.

"When delivery is made on the 15 units ordered in June together with the 13 authorized today, the Erie Railroad will be within striking distance of its goal of complete dieselization" declared Mr. Johnston.

The increased dieselization program is paying off in higher operating efficiency and economies, Mr. Johnston explained. It is reflected in such efficiency factors as "miles per car per day" which shows an increase of five percent over a year ago, and "gross ton-miles per train hour" which set a new high record at 58,400 tons for the first seven months of this year, an increase of three percent over last year, the previous high record. This factor is the ICC's accepted measurement of railroad operating efficiency in freight service, and the Erie record is one of the best performances of any railroad in the United States.

In the entire Erie territory from New York to Chicago, steam locomotives remain on only three divisions at the present time. Ten years ago, the Erie had 650 steam locomotives in service compared with only 127 today, many of which are in assignments where very little mileage is made. The old steam locomotives have been sold for scrap mostly to steel mills where it is badly needed.
