Better Health For Children

A Community Service Issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

Until recent years little was known about the cause of Cerebral Palsy and consequently little was done to help such handicapped children. The first Cerebral Palsy clinic in New York State was started in 1941 by Buffalo's Children's Hospital. Its need was so great that it soon outgrew its hospital quarters and moved to a separate building where, with the financial assistance of the Variety Club, it has facilities and personnel to handle any type of treatable Cerebral Palsy case. Continuous research is being carried on throughout the county to learn more about the causes of brain injury which results in this crippling disease.

Many children suffering from Cerebral Palsy have normal or better than normal intelligence, however some are less fortunate and have limited mental development. All of these patients are handicapped to some extent by inability to coordinate their musular actions so that they make involuntary, jerky motions and contortions. Usually their speech and sence of balance are effected. There is hope for many of these children through specialized exercises and training conducted under medical supervision. Especially designed equipment has been developed to assist in training Cerebral Palsy children how to use their muscles and the improvement achieved by most of these treatable cases is amazing but unfortunately not all are treatable.

Because treatment requires several years, New York State parents are given the benefit of State Aid to meet the heavy expense. One of the most difficult aspects of Cerebral Palsy, as of other crippling diseases, is the reaction and understanding of parents. Often parents overprotect these children without realizing that such an attitude deprives them of an opportunity to develop emotionally and mentally to their fullest capacity. Physicians and psychiatric caseworkers work with parents to assist them in understanding their problems. Parents who accept their child's handicap and who, under medical guidance, treat him as far as possible like a normal child, provide him with the greatest help.

In order to determine the treatability of a Cerebral Palsy child, the Children's Hospital gives all applicants a through examination by a dignostic team composed of a pediatrician, neurologist, orthopedist, psychiatrist and medical social worker.

B Is for Broilers and Barbecue

Maybe you think of chicken as a dress-up Sunday meal, but it's mighty good eating for picnics too. And you don't have to serve it cold unless, of course, cold chicken is a family favorite.

For picnic chicken served hot, try barbecued broilers. If you don't have a charcoal burner or an outdoor fireplace, you can make a temporary one with a few cinder blocks and a wire grate. You'll need a fork for turning the broilers, a small brush, and a saucepan to keep the barbecue sauce hot. The broilers should weigh about one and a half pounds and should be split in half. To cook them, dip the broilers in hot barbecue sauce and place them over the fire. Every five minutes, brush them with hot sauce and turn them. Broilers will take about 45 minutes to cook, depending on their size.

Scorch Stains

With all the ironing you do on cotton clothes it's a minor miracle if you don't scorch a dress or skirt or blouse sometime during the summer. But you can remove light scorch stains on cottons or linens fairly easily.

One treatment is to sponge the stain with soap and water, rinse thoroughly, and lay the scorched surface in the sun. Another method is to dampen a light cloth with hydrogen peroxide, lay the cloth over the scorched spot, place a dry cloth on top of the dampened one, and press with a warm iron. You do have to be careful not to let the iron come in contact with the peroxide; so if the dry cloth becomes damp, replace it with another dry one.

These remedies are good only for light scorch. Heavy scorch that has damaged the fibers of the material cannot be removed.

Muffins

A peach of a muffin--if you'll excuse the pun--can be made with an ordinary muffin recipe, diced peaches, and a sugar-cinnamon-nutmeg mixture. Peach muffins are a fine seasonal treat for the family and easy to make. Dice the peaches and add them along with a half of the sugar-spice mixture during the last part of the muffin mixing. Drop batter in muffin cups. Sprinkle the remainder of the mixed sugar and spices over the top of each muffin and bake. Your family's pretty sure to like the crunchy, sugary crust.

Step Saving Shelf

While you have canning in mind, you might suggest to the man of the house that you could use a narrow storage shelf at the top of the cellar steps to hold a small supply of canned goods for current use. Such a shelf, say specialists at the New York State College of Home Eonomics, is also good for empty jars. You can then take all the accumulated jars downstairs in one trip. And you can bring back as many jars of canned goods as you think you will need within a short time.

For long storage, you'll want to keep your canned goods in a cool, dark, dry, well-ventilated place where the temperature never falls below freezing.

AUTOMOTIVE EXCISE tax increases as proposed can mean a higher cost of living for everyone, according to a statement State Grange Master Henry D. Sherwood issued this week. The increases are contained in a revenue bill already passed by the House and pending in the Senate and include a 7-10 per cent rise in F. E. T. on new cars, a one-half cent increase in per gallon gasoline tax, and a boost from 5-8 per cent on trucks, truck-trailers and buses, automotive parts and acessories. Grange, representing more than 143,000 members in New York State alone is absolutely opposed to these increased taxes. "Our organization has taken this position," Mr. Sherwood says, "because these taxes are discriminatory and unfair, and single out one form of transportation to bear a disproportionate share of the tax burden. These taxes on gasoline, trucks, parts and accessories would be immediately reflected in the farmer's cost of operation, forcing food costs up and resulting in a generally higher cost of living for everyone." We join many other organizations in opposing these tax increases, and have so informed U. S. Senators Ives and Lehman.

GRANGE SESSIONS in Atlantic City this November are attracting an increasing number of New York members who wish to take the highest or Seventh Degree of the Assembly of Demeter. Those wishing to make reservations are requested to write directly to Housing Bureau, 16 Central Pier, Atlantic City, N. J. Do not write State or National Grange. We have learned of one Grange, Hawleyton in Broome county, which has chartered a plane to fly them direct, returning the same evening, so that members can take advantage of the ceremonies. The fee is norminal when a group of 25 get together, and you might want to adopt the idea in your Grange.

FARMERS and County farm leaders in New York State are refusing to be herded into the lock-step formation that the U. S. Dep't of Agriculture is demanding in a county survey of agricultural policies. It is an encouraging sign, and the first courageous rebellion against the hand-out tactics that the administration has been using under the guise of aiding the farm problems. These thinly-veiled devices may work with the midwest farmer, when the administration is looking for votes, as now, but the northeastern farm family unit is awakening to the fact he is paying to high a price in integrity, and his feed bill.
