Better Health For Children

A Community Service issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

Parents are sometimes confronted with the problem of having their toilet-trained child suddenly revert to the habit of bed-wetting. Doctors at the Children's Hospital say there are many physical and psychological causes for this.

Frequently children who have had toilet training forced upon them when they were too young will start wetting without apparent reason. Doctors believe that this may be because of a subconscious resentment — too much emphasis having been placed on training when they were too little to understand. For this reason most doctors nowadays consider it unwise to attempt to train a child until he it 1 or 1½ years old. Picking up a small baby every few hours day and night in an effort to anticipate his bed-wetting, makes him nervous with the result that he it apt to wet more, rather than less, frequently.

Trained older children sometimes start wetting because of some psychological reason such as homesickness, resentment toward a new baby, tenseness or fellings of inferiority. Psychiatrists who have made a study of this problem believe that it is more common among repressed, introverted and high-strung children than among those who are out-going, well adjusted and calm.

If by the time your child is 4 or 5 he is not trained, do not make the mistake of intensifying your training efforts; rather, try to find the cause. Does the child feel inadequate or insecure? Does he feel less capable than other children? Is he being urged beyond his abilities in school? Has nagging made him feel guilty?

Parents who cannot find the cause for persistent bed-wetting should seek the help of a Child Guidance Clinic and specially trained child psychiatrists who deal constantly with this problem. Most older children want to stop bed-wetting and feel ashamed of their lack of control. Therefore they cooperate well with the psychiatrist, who through consultations with the parents and child, can correct the child's psychological difficulty.

If the bed-wetting is due to a physical condition or illness, the child should be taken to your doctor for a thorough physical examination and diagnosis. Any little child is apt to wet himself if he is frightened or laughs suddenly. An occasional accident of this kind is not cause for anxiety about his health. The child will gain self-control as he gets older; in the meantime, he needs to be reassured and not made to feel that he has done something shameful.

Attention Called To "Child Safety" Campaign

Albany, Aug. 28—"September, the 'Back to School' month is a crucial period for those youngsters who are going to school for the first time, "Thomas W. Ryan, Director of the State Division of Safety said today in an announcement calling attention to the state-wide "Child Safety" campaign being conducted again this year by the Division.

"It is with the beginning of school that the child most often breaks away from the parents 'round-the-clock supervision and is exposed to the dangers of the street. 'How safe is my child' is a question uppermost in the mind of every mother during the period when the child is on its way to and from school. There is justification for the fear which this question causes. During 1950 more than 1,400 bicyclists and pedestrians in the age range five to fourteen were killed in motor vehicle accidents" Ryan said.

Wide publicity is being given to the "Child Safety" effort, according to James R. Barrett, Chief of the Police Bureau of the Safety Division, who has direct supervision of the campaign. "It calls for the cooperation of every motorist and every parent," Chief Barrett said, in referring to the campaign. "The program will continue thru the entire month of September and every publicity outlet will be sought in this safety educational effort.

"The Slogan 'It's Their Street Too' is directed at the motorist upon whose shoulders rests most of the responsibility for 'Child Safety' and we cannot stress it too strongly. 'Child Safety' is one of the most humanitarian of all safety aims. It's importance cannot be overlooked." Barrett concluded.

Nelson Features Week-end Race

Gus Nelson of Bradford proved to area stock car fans at the Wellsville Raceway over the week-end that he not only had a lot of so-n under the hood but also that he knew how to run it as he drove to first places in the feature races both Saturday and Monday: received the checkered flag in four other events and was second in the only other two races in which he was entered.

His superb driving netted him a total of 23 points for the two days and pushed him well into the lead among drivers on the track.

Nelson pushed George Egbert of Scio to a new track record of 5:30 for to laps Saturday night, eclipsing the old :34 record held jointly by Nelson and Dutch Hoag of Naples. Not to be overshadowed, Nelson came back in the 12-lap semi-final and hung up a new record of 6:42 and Monday chopped an even 12 seconds from this, lowering the record for the distance to 6:30.

Nelson also knocked three seconds off the track record in the feature event as he clocked at 11:12. The former record of 11:15 was set by the late Dean Sprague an July 14.

Doan came in for his share of the glory and incidently the prize money, as he drove his yellow and black stock to first place in the first heat and first semi-final and staged a battle with Nelson in the feature.

Another full program of racing is planned at Wellsville and as an added attraction the Rushford Community Band, winner of many awards in marching competition will be present to perform prior to and during the racing program.
