IRA BLIXT, County Agent

Watch Your Barn For Overload

With the unusally good growth of second cutting hay Allegany County farmers are cautioned by County Agricultural Agent H. Ira Blixt to avoid overloading their barns. This is especially true where baled hay is to be stored. Most barns in Allegany County were constructed to store loose hay instead of baled hay.

Agent Blixt points out that baled hay weights about seven pounds per cubic feet compared to loose hay weighing only four pounds per cubic foot.

He advises dairymen to check the girders and joists as additional hay is stored in the barn. And where temporary reinforcement is needed wood posts or steel post jacks may be used to give additional support. "Each post should be toe-ailed or fastened securely at the top. This will prevent the posts from falling and causing injury as the load is removed from the mow later in the season."

Any farmer desiring advice on calculating the amount of loose or baled hay which can be stored safely in a barn should contact Mr. Blixt at his office in Belmont. Bulletins on weight loads are available at the office.

Wheat Variety Recommended

Allegany County farmers are expected to plant about the same acreage of wheat this fall and Cornell 595 and Yorkwin are the two recommended soft white winter wheat varieties for Allegany County. These two varieties are now used on about 95 per cent of the county's wheat acreage.

Professor A. A. Johnson, plant breeding specialist at Cornell states that Cornell 585 is somewhat stiffer strawed than Korkwin and produces a slightly higher yield. "It is, however, in certain years more susceptible to shattering. Both varieties are rated very highly as soft white milling wheats. Because of this quality New York State wheat is highly regarded by wheat millers and bakers who produce and use the soft white specialty flours.

"To get the maximum yield and quality in wheat production, choice of good seed is equally important to choice of variety. Certified seed is first choice and growers can well afford the slight additional cost. The best source of certified seed is from the local feed and seed stores. Growers should use seed, which has been cleaned, treated and tested for germination and quality."

The high yielding Cornell 595 is very responsive to high fertility level, agent Blixt added. He suggests using commercial fertilizers at time of planting and stable manure as a top dressing.

County Agent Blixt advised growers to plant wheat on September 16-28 to avoid the Hessian fly injury to wheat.

Feed Costs Higher

Allegany dairymen will have ample feed supplies for the coming winter feeding season, but will face about 10 per cent higher level of farm costs than a year ago.

This information has been received by County Agricultural Agent Blixt from Prof. L. C. Cunningham agricultural economist at Cornell.

Prof. Cunningham pointed out that the 1951 oat crop in the state is nearly 5 per cent larger than last year's good crop and among the largest crops on record. "The corn crop is also unusally large. An other 6-million ton hay crop has been harvested, but the quality of the crop is below normal because of excessive rains during the harvesting season.

"Total, feed-grain production in the corn belt—the major source of our 2-million ton shipped-in supplies—is expected to be about the third largest on record."

Despite this favorable feed situation, agent Blixt cited the price of a typical dairy ration in recent weeks has been costing from three dollars to six dollars per ton more than a year ago. "Other costs of dairy farm operation show even greater increases over the levels of last year."

Cunningham said, farm wages in New York on July 1, the latest available report date, were 15 per cent higher than on that date in 1950. "Farm machinery prices are nine per cent higher and building material prices are 15 per cent higher.

"The index of costs, as calculated at Cornell, reached an all-time high in July 1951, of 337 when the base period 1910-14 is called 100. This figure exceeded the previous high which occurred in June 1948 by nine points.

All dairy farm costs, taken as a group, including purchased feed, wages, machinery, buildings, seed and fertilizer, taxes and insurance, have risen almost steadily since the end of the post-war slump which occurred in early 1950 Agent Blixt added.

Palmyra Feeder Sale

Beef producers in Allegany County who plan to enter feeder calves in the annual Palmyra Feeder Sale should make their entries immediately. Forrest Holmes, Director of the New York State Breeders & Feeders Improvement Project from this county states. Entry blanks are available from the office of C. W. Hebblethwaite, Assistant County Agricultural Agent at Belmont.

The Sale which will be held Saturday, October 27, is sponsored annually by the New York State Beef Cattle Breeders & Feeders Improvement Project. The Palmyra Fall Sale is the only one of its type in New York State. All cattle are weighed and graded according to quality and then sold in uniform lots at auction. All cattle accepted for the sale must be sired by a Purebred Angus, Hereford, or Beef Short Horn Bull and must be approved by a sifting committee.

Director Holmes said: "This Sale not only assures the buyer of good quality selected cattle and also gives the producer an opportunity to see how his cattle compare with those of other beef producers in the State."

Hoag, Nelson, Doan Feature At Raceway

Spectators looking for thrills, really found plenty of them at the Wellsville Raceway, Saturday night when Dutch Hoag of Naples; Loren Doan of Knoxville and Gus Nelson of Bradford staged what was probably the most outstanding races of the season.

Hoag, who returned to the Wellsville track after a lay off of several weeks following the sale of the car which he drove to the Mid-season Championship, apparently has another modified equally as good as the first. He drove to first place in all three races in which he was entered.

Doan, still driving his strickly stock car, finished first in his heat, was second to Dean Layfield in the semi and third in the feature. This Saturday night in addition to the regular card of six races it was planned to have Doan, Hoag and Nelson race race against the clock in an effort to determine which car is the fastest when not hampered by a congested track.

The Rushford Band was on hand Saturday night to compete in the area band contest being held in connection with the Saturday night races. Efforts are being made to secure another group for this week and if successful this will mark the conclusion of the contest. Bands which have competed are, The Canaseraga Central School Band, Scio Firemen's Band, Tioga County Grange Band, and the Rushford Band. Supporters of these groups are urged to send their votes to Robert Wilson in Whitesville, as soon as possible in order that the finals may be arranged. The ultimate winner of the contest will receive a $100 prize.
