Hints for Ironing Day

When you dampen clothes, say specialists at the State College of Home Economics at Cornell, dampen linens first. Then dampen the cottons silks, and rayons last. An iron heats more quickly than it cools. For that reason, it is well to iron first the fabrics which need the lower temperatures. By sprinkling rayons last, you will have them on top of the pile ready for the first ironing. Keep dampened clothes in a basket lined with a plastic fabric or oilcloth. Make the lining large enough to cover dampened clothes, or cut a separate piece for cover.

Winter Garden

It's true that you can't hold back winter with both hands, but you can cherish a tangible bit of summer through the cold months. How? With a Lilliputian garden of moss and berries, planted in a covered glass bowl that will let in light.

A glass baking dish or casserole make good containers. Line the bottom with Sphagnum moss which you can buy at the florists or find in swampy places. Add a little leaf mold, and, from the woods, gather small plants with their roots - partridge berry, wintergreen, evergreen seedlings and ground pine, any kind of mosses, lichens, and tiny ferns. Be sure the Sphagnum moss is damp when you root the plants in it.

Keep the cover on the glass dish so that the moisture which gathers at room temperature can drop back onto the plants. Occasionally when the glass becomes steamed over, remove the cover for an hour or so to prevent spreading of any molds that may be present. You probably wont need to add water for several months.
