Blanford, Market Administrator of the New York Metropolitan milk marketing area. The uniform price in September was $4.76 per hundred and in October a year ago, $4.63.

Dr. Blanford also announced a producer butterfat differential for October of 5.8 cents for each tenth of a pound of fat above or below the 3.5 standard.

Higher Rates For "Extended" Insurance

Higher rates on insurance against damage from smoke, hail, wind, explosion and other causes went into effect in New York State Monday.

The "extended coverage" is the practice of expanding ordinary fire insurance to include damage from other causes.

The department said the new rates were made necessary by the companies' losses over the years which were multiplied greatly by claims resulting from last November's hurricane when more than a million claims were filed in the Northeastern States and the dollar loss hit an estimated $150 million.

Under the new rates, the full coverage fee on dwellings, formerly seven cents per $100, has been doubled to 14 cents. When a $50 windstorm loss deductible is used, the increase is from five to eight cents per $100.

The increases for apartment houses, mercantile buildings, institutions and the like amount to one cent per $100 with deductible and five cents without.

No increases have been made on buildings constructed of fire resistant materials since these afford greater protection against wind damage.

The new rates do not apply to insurance now in force.

Two Hour Parking Looms Again

A little over a year ago the Village Board passed a two hour parking-zoning law, but through the co-operation of the motorists, businessmen and truckers who use our Main street daily it has not been necessary to enforce the law. However, with the coming of the first snow storm every one seems to try to get as close to their destination as possible without regard to others and if the practice continues it will become necessary to enforce the two hour parking regulation which will be "rough on everyone."

Motorists are asked to use a little common sense and courtesy about the length of time parking and how they park in order to avoid the necessity of enforcing the parking regulation.
