OUTSIDE TESTIMONY.

The Advantages of Having a School Under the Regents.

The article in the News last week written by Prof. Armstrong, relative to placing the Andover School under the charge of the Regents, received a wide reading, and the matter has been freely discussed during the past week. Prof. Armstrong has received letters from the Principals of the Belmont and Cuba Schools, both of which have taken the step which Mr. Armstrong advises the Andover School to take. These letters are interesting as showing the benefits to be derived by putting a School in shape to receive its share of the moneys appropriated for educational purposes, and at the same time open a wider field for the growth of the school.

They are as follows:

BELMONT N. Y., Nov. 14th, 1891.

Principal T. H. Armstrong, Andover, N. Y.

DEAR MR. ARMSTRONG: I notice in the Andover News an article from your pen regarding Regents' work and the desirability of establishing an academic department in your school. I want to heartily endorse the statements made in that article. Belmont Academy has had an academic department for two years. The school district bonded itself, in the fall of 1889, for $800, in order to purchase the needed books and apparatus. Please note that this is considerably more money than your school will need to raise. You state that the Regents' income will pay the interest on the money required. Our income from the Regents has not only done this, but is rapidly paying the principal. You claim that the academic department will build up the school. Ours has done so. The tuition money three years ago had never exceeded $80 per year. Last year it was about $300, and this year we expect $400. Our public money has increased nearly as rapidly. Three years ago the average registration in the school was 154; this fall we have registered 235. Of course the expenses have increased somewhat, but not as rapidly as the income. The amount raised by taxation for maintenance of the school is, I believe, exactly the same as before the introduction of the academic department. There is some prospect that it will be decreased next year.

To sum up the whole matter, we are well satisfied with our experiment. We have better school advantages without increased expense. The young people of Belmont went to Alfred University and to other schools for educational advantages; now they stay at home, and the young people from other towns come here. We have made outgo an income, and ANDOVER CAN DO THE SAME. Few schools in Western New York are better situated for attracting foreign attendance, and the only wonder is that this was not realized long ago.

Yours very truly,

JAY CRISSEY.

CUBA, N. Y., Nov. 10th, 1891.

FRIEND ARMSTRONG: Your letter of yesterday reached me today. I must ask to be pardoned for not sending on the statement in relation to the amount of money we receive from the Regents. The rate per pupil is not the same every year, as you doubtless know. Two years ago last June I reported 41 pupils that met the Regents' requirements, to be counted in the distribution of the Regents' money. The 41 drew about $170 for their attendance. A year ago last June I reported 46 pupils and they drew $180. Last June I reported 49 pupils; if they draw $180 we expect to receive over $300, for diplomas and certificates will make nearly as much as attendance. The amount we are to receive on credentials for last year's work is as follows:

2 Classical Diplomas at $15.....	$30
2 Academic " at 10.....	20
24 Certificates at $5.....	120
	$170

Making a total, with amount received for attendance, of $330.

A school under charge of the Regents will, in a few years, draw from the Regents more money than it cost to put the school in this charge; besides, the school has all the use of the library and apparatus for which the expense was incurred. Better work can be done, as the interest can more easily be kept up. The school that is under the Regents has, as a rule, a better name and higher standing, especially in the estimation of educated men.

Yours respectfully,

J. E. DEWEY.

Hart Rheumatic Remedy Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Gents:—A gentleman came to me of his own accord and wanted to recommend your Remedy—Cyrus G. White of Arkport, N. Y.—he thinks it saved his life. If you write him he will give you a first-class recommendation. He had an abscess in the rectum which broke once and was gathering again, and the doctors did not think he would live. He was advised to take the remedy to purify the blood, which he did, and the abscess went away, and he is well and cannot say too much in its praise. Your Remedy is selling well here, and giving good satisfaction. I take pleasure in recommending it and frequently start a new customer with it. A certain doctor here has prescribed it in a case of Chronic Rheumatism and it has done more good than he could do before. Yours respectfully, A. S. VAN WINKLE, Druggist. Sold by druggists.
