Paris and Balzac.
As Dr. Johnson could not live away from Fleet street, so Balzac was ever returning to the beloved mud and dust, the rain and flickering lights, the crowds on the boulevards, and the loneliness of those dismal cutthroat streets which he has shown as in a stereoscope at the beginning of the "Histoire des Treize." "Oh, Paris!" he exclaims with enthusiasm, "he that has not admired thy somber landscapes thy broken jets of light, thy deep and silent alleys without issue; he that has not listened to thy murmurs between midnight and two hours after, knowing nothing of the true poetry which is in thee, or of thy large and curious contrasts."

And he proceeds to sketch the Rue Soly in colors at once ignoble and overpowering. Ignoble! It is the proper word for Balzac's subject matter, though unjust if applied to the man. He displays too vast an energy, too extensive a knowledge of human nature, to be thrust outside the temple of fame on the score of his ill manners. But the sculptor is more than the anatomist, and the question of realism must be decided by contrasting the Venus of Milo with Balzac's supreme creation, the Venus of the Pere la Chaise.—Quarterly Review.

Coal from Peat.
A St. Petersburg journal states that a Russian civil engineer, M. de Nicoloff, has succeeded in producing a fuel from peat greatly resembling anthracite coal. The inventor has obtained a patent for his process, which is said to be accomplished by the aid of certain chemicals, and lately an imperial commission has been engaged in experimenting with the fuel, the result having been very favorable. The peat was found to give a little less heat than ordinary coal, but more than fir or birch wood, which is largely used on railways and steamers and in factories in Russia. In other respects, however, the peat is superior to coal, being cheaper, containing but a small percentage of sulphur and being much smaller in bulk. The artificial fuel throws off no dirt and emits no smell, while burning with a clear white flame.

We use Alcohol
pure alcohol to make WOLFF'S ACME BLACKING. Alcohol is good for leather; it is good for the skin. Alcohol is the chief ingredient of Cologne, Florida Water, and Bay Rum the well known face washes. We think there is nothing too costly to use in a good leather preservative.
Acme Blacking retails at 20c. and at that price sells readily. Many people are so accustomed to buying a dressing or blacking at 5c. and 10c. a bottle that they cannot understand that a blacking can be cheap at 20c.
