Mr. Harian M. Fisher of South Bloom-field made the next address from the text "VALUE OF UNDERDRAINING."

All through the United States there are tracts of land that are valueless because they are non-productive. Some are of a heavy clay soil that retains water till too late in the spring to work them; others are marshes, others so-called "sloughs" that are wet at all seasons and whose product is marsh grass. Nearly all of these lands can been well drained they have been found the most valuable of any on the farms, producing large crops of grass, onions, asparagus and other like crops. Mr. Fisher showed, by aid of a chart, a rude but simple and effective plan for taking the level of land one wishes to drain, so that the amount of fall and the depth of the ditches can be easily determined. He said the drained land always plows up more friable in the spring, because being relieved of its surplus water the frost has been able to go down and loosen the soil, thus making it easier to work and more productive. If those who own these waste places "will go to work and drain them they will find the money expended will bring much better returns than if invested in commercial fertilizers to be put on already worn-outland. He recommended threined instead of two-inch tile, unless the grade is heavy and but a small amount of water is to be run off. The horse shoe tile is more v1 hable for some iccations, and less for others, than the round tile, and, as a rule, the ditches should not be more than three and one-half rods apart, making three drains to the sore. He gave some of his experience in the drainage and enumerated some of the gains in crop yields as a result, showing that the antilay of money had brought him a good dividend. Comparisons in cost were also made between tile and stone drains, showing the advantage of the tile over the stone, although he knew of stone ditches that have been in use for over fifty years, and are yet in excellent condition. His tile drains are laid at a depth of two to three feet. One must be governed by the situation, the termination of the drain usually determining the depth:

Several questions relating to tile, stone and hoard drains. were asked, as the conclusion of the address, one of which related to the cost of draining an acre, which Mr. Fisher answered by saying his was about $21.

More Dresses for Less Money.

Tressmaking at home is one of the "social nuisances," but a stylish wardrobe at half the cost is one of its compensations. Besides, you have an opportunity of working out your own ideas, which the modiste either cart or won't do. The great fatigue has deterred many ladies from making their own dresses, but with Hall's Bazar Form this objection is entirely removed. It is adjustable, and can be made to it NEARLY EVERY size. When covered with a waist and arranged to fit your own proportions, the Form becomes an exact model of yourseif.
