We use Alcohol

pure alcohol to make WOLFF'S ACME BLACKING. Alcohol is good for leather; it is good for the skin. Alcohol is the chief ingredient of Cologne, Florida Water, and Bay Rum the well known face washes. We think there is nothing too costly to use in a good leather preservative.

Acme Blacking retails at 20c. and at that price sells readily. Many people are so accustomed to buying a dressing or blacking at 5c. and 10c. a bottle that they cannot understand that a blacking can be cheap at 20c. We want to meet them with cheapness if we can, and to accomplish this we offer a reward of

for a recipe which will enable us to make WOLFF'S ACME BLACKING at such a price that a retailer can profitably sell it at 10c. a bottle. We hold this offer open until Jan. 1st, 1893.

A Field Imagination.

Indeed the idea of transmigration, which is a poetic forecast of the more scientific doctrine here enunciated, is very familiar one. Coleridge in his boyhood one day was proceeding through the Strand, stretching out his arms as if swimming, when a passer by, feeling a hand at his coat tail, turned rudely round and seized him as a pick-pocket. Coleridge denied the charge and confessed that he had forgotten his whereabouts in the impression that he was Leander swimming across the Hellespont, a wretched street lamp being formed by his imagination into the signal light of the beautiful priestess of Sestos.

Now it would be a little too fanciful that Coleridge may have numbered Leander among his ancestors and that Leander's memory was suddenly in an abnormal moment reasserting itself through the brain of Coleridge. It would be too fanciful, and besides it is possible that Leander may really never even have existed.—American Notes and Queries.

Fennimore's Odd Well.

There is, not far from Fennimore, Wis., a peculiar well, which at present is but little known. It is about 80 feet deep, the lower 40 feet being drilled. About 20 feet from the surface there enters a crevice, out of which rushes a current of air with force so great as to be felt at the top of the well, and a temperature so low as to freeze a small stream which enters on the opposite side about 5 feet above the crevice. The first 40 feet of the well is through a shaly sandstone, so soft as to require cribbing nearly the whole depth. Lower down, where it is drilled, there is a stratum of very hard rock several feet in thickness. Below this again the rock is soft. The well is located on the side of a deep sandstone ridge, from which the cold air crevice comes.—St. Louis Republic.

Garfield Killed the Rat.

Rev. Mr. Wakefield, of Warren, O., has secured the home formerly occupied by the Garfields as a residence. Among the numerous things therein is a bullet hole in the wainscot in the library. The story thereof is that home on a furlough Garfield was writing late at night, when he went to his wife's bedside and asked, "Crete, are you awake?" She said she was a little, and he told her not to be frightened when she heard the report of a pistol, for he was going to fire at a confounded rat that was worrying him by gnawing away at the woodwork at his feet. He got the rat located by the sound, and fired through the board and killed it.—Exchange.
