"Well," he replied, "you could have taken the trail over the hills, saved protably two hours' waking, and reached the camp in abso ute safety and certainty, only you did not know of the trail. It is just so in business, the man that wants to travel with an ox team and ride in the wagon, must go by the big road, while the fellow who goes by the trail will get there first, and if there is only one supper to be had at the station the cross country traveler is the one who will eat it. navs on operations, sold soon after as nign as $18.8 per share, and that upwards of $300, 000,000 were paid out in dividends to share-holders.

To a know-edge of these facts, and a subsequent thorough acquaintance with the Georgia gold region, which my triend, the Captain, bas not overestimated, may be directly attributed the formation of the Atlanta Gold Mining Company.

The company has carefully selected its property, has placed in management of the same men of experience, tried in the business, and now places before you the opportunity to secure some of its shares at fifty per cent, of their par value, or $5.00 per share. The money you pay for these shares will be used in erecting complete and suitable reduction mills, and the officers of the company feel sure that at the same time that you are furnishing the funds to put the property upon a paying basis; you will be planting, your own feet upon one of these "short roads to wealth" which have enabled every rich man in this country to reach his present position.

The stock is tuily paid up and non-assessable: the total amount of stock is $100.00, and $50,000 of this amount is devoted to the uses of the treasury of the company.

The company has reserved the right to advance the price of its shares without formal notice, and the demand for stock is such that an advance is now in contemplation, but is not as yet ordered.

The Southern Banking and Trust Co., of Atlanta, Ga., one of the strongest financial institutions in the South, acts as transfer agents for the company, and of it all orders for stock should be addressed, accompanied either with New York exchange or post-ordered.

The True Cure.

There are two ways of dealing with There are two ways of dealing with the evils in the world which we justly deplore and wish to abolish: one is to attack and try to break them down forcibly, the other to dissolve or exhale them by the active presence of good. The former of these methods appears so much the more direct and obvious so much the more direct and obvious that it generally gains the first place in our attention. We see a wrong, and our impulse is to crush it: we see injustice, and we long to exterminate we observe an unrighteous instituit; we observe an unrighteous institu-tion, and we desire to overthrow it. The slower and less direct method of overcoming evil with good, of substi-tuting a better way for that which is bad, of devoting the same-energy to building up that we would have given to the work of tearing down, obtains a gradual hold over us only with time a gradual hold over us only with time
