The prevailing opinion seems to be that the bill probably will got through as by its passage the Democrate will gain one more member in the Legislature.

WISPS FROM WELLSVILLE.

The snoke of the great battle fought Thursday in each month.

Extracts from Miss Willard's annual address before the National Convention held in Deuver, Col. Oct. 28—Nov. 2:

It has been stated by military experts that forty well trained soldiers are able to resist ten thousand who have had no discipline. If the temperance army, compared with the great army of the world, is as small as this comparison between the figures forty and ten thousand would indicate, and no doubt it is, we must remember that those who have their hearts set as a flint, those who have their hearts set as a flint, those who have their hearts set as a nubroken bost, must in the nature of things, make mighty inroads on the great mobocracy of thoughtless, ignorant, careless on the call of the great battle fought the smooth ago has blown away, and though there are many relics of the terribie struggle still lett, Wells, will have a settled down to her tearly and who wile have to death by some scowling Republican or being hugged to death by some shown or being hugged to death by some hilarous of being hugged to death by some hilarous or being hugged to death by some shown or being hugged to death by some hilarous or being hugged to death by some shown or being fright or being hugged to death by some shown or being hug The smoke of the great battle fought parallel and without a peer because it does not expect to win through any sleight of hand, it does not expect to surprise the enemy by skirmishes or night attacks, but in the strong daylight of reason, conscience, faith, it does expect to put to rout the armies of aliens—those aliens of appetite, ignorance and greed which form the only hope of whiskey makers and beer politicians.

We are to encourage our hearts by the remembrance that the Master said, "A little leaven leaveneth the whole tump," and though our work seems small when company with the great world work of that log, still, if it brings about the wondrous transformation from thoughtlessness to thoughtfulness, everything else that we desire must surely follow.

Applebee's store, and Mrs. Clark Wath in through and her exister, Mrs. Coleman, spent Thanksgiving with the strong daylight of reason, conscience, faith, it does expect to put to rout their brother, Erwin Bloss, at Batavia. Thanksgiving was duly celebrated in Wellsville, I judge, from the tunkeys in the market, though just why a turkey is the national bird for that particular day I don't know, and not one of the great political speakers we have had here this fall has explained it though they explained everything else on the face of the earth and away beyond, miles and miles beyond, and Prof. French in his inimitable chalk talk didn't either, but he did give has an excellent lecture on art. Mr. Harding deserves great praise for his persistence in bringing us good things in the way of entertainment. Nothing but solid wall can stop the Professor when he starts tog on alead and it must be pretty high at that.

It Takes Two to Marry.

The little village of Canisteo had a good-sized sensation to gossip about Thanksgiving Day. Chris. Hempstad and Miss Roxy Young were to have been married the day previous, but for some unknown reason Hempstad failed to live up to his part of the agreement, invitations had been sent out to friends and relatives and on the evening set for the marriage, a number of guests, with presents, assembled at the home of the bride, where they waited for four hours for the groom to appear.

Finally upon receipt of a telegram the expectant bride announced that there would be no wedding. She did not faint or go into hysterics, but simply said that she was glad that the marriage had not taken place, and that she had escaped throwing herself away on such an unworthy and false young man. The little village of Canisteo had a Royal Blood.

Last week A. C. Frisbey received from Lansing, (Mich.) Stock Farm, the pure blood Shropshire ram lamb Springdale Beacon, registered No. 907 J. M. T. ear tag 46724. His sire, Springdale Reserve was imported from Shropshire, England, in 1889. Springdale Beacon is of very choice breeding, having the blood of "The Rector," the greatest Shropshire of them all, on the side of both the sire and dam. "The Rector" was let to John Darling in 1884 for $1650 for the season. His blood is much sought by those who desire the fluest stock, and Mr. Frisbey's late purchase, Springdale Beacon, cannot fail to develop the good points of his noted ancestor. With the flock of three-fourths blood Shropshire ewes that Mr. Frisbey has on his farm, he expects to raise some very fine Shropshire lambs.
