Each cell is perfectly independent of all the others with which it may be associated, and is a distinct individual plant, within which all the vital functions are carried

Tea intemperance.

There is no doubt as to the teadrinking propensities of the English nace. We flirt with coffee, but tea is our only serious love. With the exception of Russia, we drink more of ithan all the rest of the continent put together. It is the one universal drink of all classes, and, it is to be leared, by all classes it is abused in the same fashion. The grand dame and the charwoman both find solace in the teacup, and both turn to it

Mr. Edison was asked what he chought of the possibility of drawing a new food from the earth by electricity. He said he saw no reason why it should not be done.

"Only a few reactions are necessary," he replied. "I think that inorganic elements may be made to furnish sustenance. The carbo-hydrates, such as sugar and starch, would probably be the cheaper." Mr. Edison did not say, however, how it could be done. Perhaps he contemplates trying it. And when Mr. Edison contemplates doing anything he plates trying it. And when Mr. Ed-ison contemplates doing anything he generally waits until he does it before he says anything about it.

He is not a believer in the lately heralded method of using high tension currents for producing light. This is the current of which Nikola Tesla is the strongest advocate. We must expect for the strongest advocate. Itesia is the strongest advocate. We must expect, so they say, a wonderful/revolution in the lighting of our houses during the next decade. It will come from invisible sources and the rooms will be in a glow of lightan essentially modern condition. Mr. Edison does not think it practical from the fact that he does not believe people would use it.

Secrets Well Kept.

The oldest secret trade process now In coldest secret trade process now in existence is in all probability either that method of inlaying the hardest steel with gold and silver, which seems to have been practiced at Damascus ages ago, and is still still known only to the Syrian smiths and their pupils, or else the manufacture of Chinese red or vermilion.

The Populist.

Why shouldn't there be a third party? It is true they disturb the smooth running of the regular organizations and sometimes overturn elections, but what is popular is founded on merit: As for instance, among all the remedies used for sprains and bruises, St. Jacobs Gil is the most popular because it is known to be the best; hence it is the Pop-ulest in medicine. The more because it cures so promptly and surely. There is no crippling from sprain where this old ramedy is used. It imparts new life and strength and the pain vanishes. Truly it is a Popu-list. is true they disturb the smooth running of

BAUCO ENGLISM.

Marvelous Literary Productions Angle-Indian Rhetoricians.

A correspondent asks what "Babo A correspondent asks what "Baboo," or "Baboi," is. The word "baboo," or "baboi," is 'Anglo-Indian, and is usef to designate the language or phrase-ology employed by native Indiana (chiefly Bengalis) who affect an English education. It is stitled, bombastic and abounds in startling contortions of rhetoric and grammar. A wood illustration of it is given in contortions of rhetoric and grammar. A good illustration of it is given in an incident related by a traveler recently returned from India. He says that one day, while telegraph operator in one of the North Bengal towns, a native came to him and presented a message to be sent. "This is not correct." he said to the native. "Oh, yes, it is," replied the latter. "But it is not," persisted the operator. "It does not mean anything as you have does not mean anything as you have written it." Mr. Native, however, insisted that he knew what he was about and threatened to report the operator to his superior if he did not send the message without further delay. So the message went as writ-ten, and this is the way it read: "Come home at once; father danger-ously dead."

"Come home at once; father dangerously dead."

A very good specimen of this Baboe English is the following, which we quote from the Englishman, an Indian paper. It is the argument of a learned pleader for an appeal. He is scoring the opposing attorney:

"My learned friend, with mere wind from a teapot, thinks to browbeat me from my legs. But this is mere gorilla warfare. I stand under the shoes of my client, and only seek to place my bone of contention clearly in your honor's eye. My learned friend vainly runs amuck
upon the sheet anchors of my case.
Your honor will be pleased enough to observe that my client is a widow, a poor chap with one post mortem son.
A widow of this country, your honor will be pleased enough to observe, is not able to eat more than one meal a day or to wear clean clothes or to look after a man. So my poor client had not such physic or mind as to be day or to wear clean clothes or to look after a man. So my poor client had not such physic or mind as to be able to assault the lusty complainant. Yet she has been deprived of some of her more valuable leather, the leather of her nose.

"My learned friend has thrown only an argument ad hominy upon my teeth, that my client's witnesses are all her own relations. But they are near relations. Their relationare near relations. Their relationship is only homeopathic. So the misty arguments of my learned friend will not hold water. At least they will not hold good water. Then my learned friend has said that there is learned friend has said that there is on the side of his client a respectable witness, viz., a pleader, and since this witness is independent, so he should be believed. But, your honor, with your honor's vast experience, is pleased enough to observe that truthfulness is not so plentiful as blackberries in this country. And I am sorry to say, though this witness is a man of my own feathers, that there are in my profession black sheep of sorry to say, through this witness is a man of my own feathers, that there are in my profession black sheep of every complexion, and some of them do not always speak gospel truth. Until the witness explains what has become of my client's nose leather he cannot be believed. He cannot be allowed to raise a castle in the air by beating upon a bush. So, trusting in that administration of British justice on which the sun never sits, I close my case."

Just fancy listening to this for a couple of hours! The counsel from whose kaleidoscopic harangue we quote the above actually won his case. How logical the plea of the other side was is a subject worth consideration.

A Fakir's Ingenuity.

Enormous business has been done lately at French fairs by a man who professed to sell rat powder that was perfectly harmless and that struck perfectly harmless and that struck rats dead on the spot. In order to convince the skeptical the man, first of all, powdered a slice of bread with the stuff, and ate a piece of it himself. Then he put the remainder under a glass case in which a rat was kept in captivity. The rat went to eat the bread and instantly fell dead. At five pence a box the powder went off like hot rolls, and the lucky proprietor of the specific was in a fair. prietor of the specific was in a fair way to make a fortune. But the police, who in France are very active in protecting the people from fraud, looked into the matter and found that the powder was nothing but ordi-nary sugar. They also discovered that the case was connected with a powerful electric battery, and that the moment the rat touched the bread the current was turned on, and it was thus his death was brought about. The man was arrested at the fair of Albi, and he has been sentenced to fifteen days' imprisonment.
