The new safe for the Andover State Bank arrived last week, and was moved to the bank and placed in position on Monday and Tuesday. It is, without doubt, one of the most secure places for depositing money and valuables to be found in Western New York, and if the liberal expenditure of money and careful attention to details of construction count for anything, the bank officials and patrons have no reason to lose a minute's peace of mind by reason of any fear that the safe and its contents will prove to be anything less than an absolutely secure place in which to keep their funds.

Gussie, the oldest son of E. Z. Cook, met with a slight accident the other day, which was only a "short remove" from a serious one. He was assisting his father in digging a trench, and was using a shovel while Mr. Cook handled a pick-axe. Gussie worked his way up a little too close to his father's pick, and received a blow on the head from the implement. Fortunately he did not receive the full force of the blow, as its course was diverted in time to avoid this. A bad cut was inflicted in his scalp, however, but the wound was dressed and sewed up, and no serious consequences are feared.

Crooker, ex-Superintendent of Public Instruction; an article entitled "How to Know Trees," by Austin C. Appgar, with directions for mounting specimens of leaves; an article entitled "Some Destructive Shade Tree Pests," by J. A. Lister, Ph. D., New York State Entomologist; songs, poems, etc., appropriate to Arbor Day; and suggestions for programs for the observance of Arbor Day. It is a very interesting book.
