HAMILTON C. NORRIS, EDITOR

ANDOVER, N. Y., June 12, 1895.

Mr. Gas Addicks, the Delaware man who bought a seat in the Senate but didn't get it, is taking revenge, as the only thing left to take.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew stands near the head of the country's expert advertising agents. No wonder the Vanderbilts pay him a fortune every year in salary; it pays them to do it.

Only the other day people were reading of the intention of the South and Central American countries to form a confederation; now Argentine and Chili are about to go to war with each other.

George Gould is said to be thinking of investing in a U. S. Senatorship. His father did it more than once, but he allowed others to occupy the seats he bought, because his own occupancy would have lessened their value.
