M. Louis Visited to incident of a famous faction of a famous bat.

1855, the night of the term of Inkerhan, when the long field had been taken and retaken eral times, that two soldiers lay side by side on the ground, which was saturated with blood. One was a Frenchman, the other a Russian. The former had his chest pierced by a ball, the latter his leg broken; possibly they had been struck at the same time.

Night came on, and with it the cold increased. The wounded men drew nearer to each other and clasped hands and in some manner exchanged good; wishes. But soon the Russian, who shivered with the cold, fell into a heavy slumber, and, having only his thin cloth coat over him, this sleep must have been fatal. When he wok oward morning and gradually recov ered consciousness, he found himself carefully wrapped in a warm military great-coat, and found it was a French great-coat. His unfortunate compan on, feeling that his hours were num bered, had had just strength enough to take his own great-coat off and wrap his new friend in it; then, with a mind perfectly at rest, he had lain down again and quietly breathed his last. The wounded Russian was taken to a hospital later the same day, and in time he recovered; but, as he remained a cripple, he was sent home to his own village. He carried home with him a button of the French great-coat to which he owed his life, and for which e had the highest veneration.

DO WOMEN NAG?

w. Lyman Abbott Writes Subject of Nagging.

well-known physician, a student of, sealth as well as disease, has called out fadignant denials by printing his opin-ion that they do. He has done it in the most considerate way, reminding one of the person who, in calling another a liar, said he did not mean it opprobri ously but merely stated it as a fact. And the denials are made in a fashion quite too feminine. "It isn't so, and besides there is good excuse for it," our defenders say. Nervous irritability, a narrowing and belittling sphere, the constant presence of obnoxious and vexatious persons—what wonder that human nature exhibits unlovely traits under these provocations? It will do us no harm to look this accusation fairin the face and see whether it be a familiar of ours, with a new and ugly name. There is no dictionary at hand; and I cannot verify my definition, but I suppose that what is meant by the word "nagging" is a constant repetition of petty reproof or command. It is a habit which every conscientious house-keeper and every thoughtful mother is yery much in danger of weaving for herself and for our of which many herself, and for fear of which man woman "lets things go," to the injury of her home and her children. How often the tired mother has "picked up" after husband and children, or done the forgotten errand, rather than seem to 'nagging.'

Not a Bit Seasick

Upon a recent homeward bound trip was a gentleman of not widely extended ocean experience, who heretofore had made only pleasant summer trips trips when the ocean was as the proverbla! mill poind for the greater portion of the time, with a storm such as the winter brings forth unknown.

"Are you a good sailor?" he asked of his nearest table companion at dinner the first day.

"Reasonably so," replied the other. 'Are you?"

"Yes, indeed. I couldn't get sick." "Sure of that, are you? For my own part I've made a great many voyages in all parts of the world. I have never een seasick yet, but I don't think I ever stepped on board a steam out having-the thought that this may be my turn."

The first speaker turned at this and winked at the others at table, as much as to indicate, "Well, we won't see much of our friend if we have rough weather." The others replied with a smile, as if they indorsed his views.

The first and second day until midnight passed pleasantly. Then the ship began to pitch and roll, and well it might, for it had struck the track of a cyclonic storm and the next morning it was in the midst of the storm itself. When the traveler who feared that 'this might be his time" found his way to his seat he discovered that his com-panions were missing.
"It was rather a hard night, steward,"

I suppose?" he said.

"That they are, sir," answered the steward. "All of this table sick, sir,

"What! Mr. Blank also?" asked the the name of the person who 't get sick. "Well, I'll have to couldn't get sick. go and see him later."

A few hours later he found his way to the cabin of the superior sailor, who was gronning wretchedly, when not Imploring someone to knock him on the head and throw him overboard.

"Why, how is this, Blank? You seal

GOLD BY THE HANDFUL

But Clends of Giant Mosquitoes Keep Tressure Scokers at Bay,

Gold in plenty may be found in the ands of the Volador River, a stream of moderate volume that comes tumbling from the anow line of the Sierra de St. Martha, in South America, but though the lowland region and the riv er bed where the precious metal abounds in fabulous quantities are easfly accessible, the mosquitoes are so thick and terrible there that all attempts to rifle the sands of the gold have so far failed. Elisee Reclus, the celebrated French geographer, was the discoverer of this wonderful stream, whose waters sweep over sands that are literally golden He told the news to the French Vice Consul at Rio Hacha, and this official obtained the concession of this Eldo-or and employe with one accord gave up the struggle and retreated.

The next to try to wring fortune from these auriferous sands was an Italian who obtained permission from the Vice Consul referred to above. The Italian started out with a party of six, who shared with him his belief and so they took along no special pro-tection against the insects. They en-dured for less than half an hour the wful torture and then fled.

Yet there are human beings who can yenture with impunity into this hell whose guardian demons are mosqui-toes, and these are some of the savage natives of the mountains from whose rocky steeps the river comes tumbling down. These savages, who mosquito-proof, are rendered by their bodies being covered with the scales of that awful disease, leprosy. The mosquitoes will not touch them.

The mosquiroes will not touen them.

But neither gold nor the gauds of civilization will tempt them to labor, and there is no human power, apparently, which will drag them out from their rude caves on the mountain side and make them labor for the white man.-New York World.

Teachers' Pensions in Germany. Germany has just taken an important step in educational legislation by adopt-ing a law providing for the pentioning of teachers in the public schools. The law provides that every regular teach-er in the public schools shall be entier in the public schools shall be enti-tled to a life pension if retired after ten years' service. If retired on account of accident or disease contracted in the discharge of duty the ten years' previ-ous service is not necessary. Nor is it in the case of destitute teachers. All over 65 years of age are entitled to a

If the teacher retires at the end of his tenth year of service his pension will be one-fourth of his salary. For each year's additional service an in-crease of one-sixth the pension will be given. No sound will be taken of work done before the teacher is 21 years old. The power of determining the teacher's right to a pension and the amount is left to the Board of Education, but the teacher is allowed to ap peal from this decision within six months after it is rendered.

The right to draw a pension is suspended when the pensioner enters the service of the State or of the school system, if the amount of his salary and pension exceed his former salary, entitle him to a second pension teacher must serve at least one year teacher must serve at reaching new position. In case of terms employment by the State his new position. In case of temperary employment by the State of Church no deduction will be made in the teacher's pension. After the teacher's death his heirs are entitled to draw his pension for one month.

Pensions amounting to $150 or less are to be taken from the State Treas. bry. If they exceed that amount they are to be paid from the sum from which teachers' salaries are drawn.

Cecil Rhodes' White Rhinoceroe Premier Cecil Rhodes recently came into possession of a white rhinoceros, and has intimated this intention of presenting it to the South African museum It is a very fine specimen of a class of beasts now nearly extinct. In me ured six feet four inches across the shoulders, and its long and short horns are two feet eleven and one-half inches and eleven and three-quarters inches respectively. Mr. Rhodes has sent the carcass home to be properly stuffed at his own expense, and the value of the gift is very considerable. Baron Rothschild recently hald $2000 for a with child recently paid $2,000 for a white rhinoceros, and the museum would have been prepared to offer a similar price had not Mr. Rhodes come to the Mr. Rhodes' rhinoceros was killed in Mashonaland.
