

THE ANDOVER NEWS
ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

HAMILTON C. NORRIS, EDITOR

ANDOVER, N. Y., October 23, 1895.

A Minnesota girl wrote her name and address on an egg and secured a husband. This is a new way to work the shell game.

There are several hundred cases of typhoid fever in Washington and the disease is on the increase. Who wants to be a Congressman, anyway?

There isn't much doubt that the proposition to bond this State for $9,000,000 would meet with much greater favor among the farmers of this section if it were proposed to spend the money for road improvement instead of for enlarging the canals.

In many cities the poor quality of drinking water is creating much talk and some action on the part of health authorities. The water is worse than usual on account of the dryness of the season and people are using as little of it as possible. We don't hear much said about the quality of whiskey, but presume it is about the same as usual and that its consumption hasn't fallen off any.

The report made to the New York State Medical Association upon the use of anti toxin in diphtheria is favorable to the new method of treatment. The mortality from the disease in New York city during the nine months of this year has been only about one half as large as it was in previous years. Both in this country and in the countries of Europe medical experience has justified the use of the anti-toxin.

After a season of abundant rains and bountiful crops comes a drouth. From all parts of the country come the same reports. Streams are very low, the water supply of cities is threatened, navigation is affected, mills are shut down on account of low water, forest and prairie fires are doing much damage. The drouth can better be borne now than it could have been earlier in the season, but the general hope is for speedy and sufficient rains.

Both parties in Massachusetts have formally declared themselves to be in favor of good roads; and as the Legislature appropriated $400,000 for roads in its last session, it will be seen that this policy must be popular. Under the system in vogue there the State undertakes the work, and a part of the cost is paid back by the county. One good result of the plan is the stimulus it furnishes to putting into good repair the roads that are not a part of the State system, and are taken care of by the towns.

The South Carolina Constitutional Convention has adopted and will cause to be placed in the new Constitution a section which we suppose is calculated to prohibit lynching in that State. But instead of aiming directly at the lynchers, the officer from whose custody a prisoner is taken will be the sufferer. We fail to see why the public official should be held responsible for the acts of a mob, unless he is accessory to the crime, and in that case he should be punishable under the same law with the principals.

Some curious things come about in politics. Senator Lexow, who conducted the investigation into New York city affairs, is nominated for reelection by the Republican party and is opposed by the reformers. Inspector Williams, who was racked by the committee, is also a Republican candidate for the State Senate and his name appears on the ticket, supported by reformers. Lexow, opposed by reformers, and Williams supported by reformers, are two things that could not have been guessed when Lexow was questioning Williams on the stand.

GEOLOGY OF THE GENESSEE VALLEY.
A Book to be Written About It by Prof. Fairchild of Rochester.

Prof. Herman L. Fairchild of Rochester University is preparing a book on the glacial lakes of the Genesee Valley, which will be published very soon. The Professor makes frequent trips to various towns gathering data for the work and calls attention to many phenomena in the geology of the region. In the course of the Genesee River there are three rock channels, the first at Portage, the second at Mt. Morris and the third at Rochester. Other similar but smaller ravines occur in the course of the tributary streams, usually near the point where the side stream enters the main valley. Such rock cuttings, Prof. Fairchild says he has observed near the mouth of the Angelica Creek, in the Canaseraga below the village of the same name, in the Canaseraga where it enters the Dansville Valley and into a small creek which joins the Canaseraga from the west at Swain's.

All these narrow channels in rock are very recent, geologically speaking. All are post glacial, having been formed by the erosion of the streams, since the disappearance of the ice of the glacial period. They indicate places where the streams have been forced to leave the old and broader pre glacial valleys and, having fallen upon rock, were compelled to excavate new channels.

For millions of years, says Prof. Fairchild, preceding the glacial period, the Genesee Valley region was exposed to the action of streams, rain, frost, decay and other forces and agencies which produce valleys, destroy the rock and create soil. The valley of the larger streams were broad and open like the upper Genesee of today, or the valleys at Dansville, Warsaw and Friendship. The narrow valleys were V-shaped, or with sloping sides, due to weathering of the rocks during a great lapse of time.

Then came a time when the climate of the northern lands were colder, and accumulation of snow compacted into ice burned the high lands of Canada and New England; the ice sheet extended partly by growth and partly by flow over all of Western New York and for many centuries moved slowly southward to the melting edge. The ice movement brought millions of tons of boulders and rock debris from the northward, and the surface of the Genesee region suffered abrasion and loss by the grinding and scraping of thick and heavy ice sheet. The result of the glaciation was not only to remove the surface of the country in exposed places and to smooth the side of the north and south valleys, but partially or wholly to fill many of the valleys with the stones and rock-flow pushed along beneath the ice or by the accumulation of stony clays and gravel at the edge of the ice. This partial filling of larger valleys and depression or entire filling of smaller valleys is the important fact of this explanation. As the ice melted away toward the north, the uncovered valleys were occupied by streams or lakes. Of necessity, the streams followed the lowest places in the half-filled valleys, and the lowest drainage lines were upon the sides of the buried valleys, yet far above the old valley bottom. The new stream would rapidly deepen its channel in the loose drift or cut down the lake outlet, and if in this work it encountered solid rock it would have no alternative but to keep its place and to make a rock channel.
